

"In Quest of the Miracle Stag is an astounding anthology of Hungarian poetry from the thirteenth century to the present. It is a revelation, an illumination and—thanks to a helpful apparatus of notes and essays by the editor Adam Makkai and other scholars—an education in a great corpus of poetry hitherto unknown in English."

James Henry
Noted Lecturer for Literature
The Essex Library Department
December 5, 1997

"It is good to be reminded of the extraordinary poetic wealth of this small country (Hungary) at various past and recent. The selection is voluminous, painstakingly edited and the level of translation from many kinds of verse is high. This is an anthology any well-reading non-poet would want to possess."

André J. Amelin, Esq.
Professor of Spanish
Comparative Literature Studies
Vol. 35, No. 2, 1999

"This new volume of Hungarian poetry in English translation fills a large gap in our knowledge of world literature and of East European literary history. Professor Adam Makkai and his team have presented an impressive collection of Hungarian verse, covering nearly eight centuries. Translated by British, American, Canadian and American poets, this anthology belongs in all public and academic libraries as well as in the homes of lovers of world literature. The book entitled In Quest of the Miracle Stag is a must for English speaking Hungarian American. It is a model of how to translate a literary culture into a new world only."

David Williams, Ph.D.
Past President, International Society for the Study of Comparative Literature,
Executive Professor of Anthropology and Linguistics, Texas University
