International Competition and Strategic Response in the Textile Industries Since 1870 Mary B. Rose, 2013-11-05

This book of essays which draws on the expertise of leading textile scholars in Britain and the United States focuses on the problem of and responses to foreign competition in textiles from the late nineteenth century to the present day. A short introductory essay by the editor is followed by a survey of the debates surrounding the British cotton industry, foreign competition and competitive advantage. The other essays consider various aspects of that competition including textile machine making, Lancashire perceptions of the rise of Japan during the inter-war period and responses to foreign competition in the British cotton industry since 1945, whilst others deal with the decline and rise of merchanting in UK textiles and European competition in woollen yarn and cloth from 1870 to 1914. A recurring theme in a number of the essays is Japanese competitive advantage in textiles. The book is unique since although there are numerous books dealing with the problems of British staple industries, none focuses primarily on the issue of competition, its sources and responses, nor on textiles in general rather than a single industry. Moreover, since the scope is international rather than limited only to the UK, it follows recent trends in British business history away from single company case studies towards a more thematic comparative approach. In addition, the international authorship of these papers gives this book a first published in 1991 wide appeal.

The Development of British Industry and Foreign Competition Derek H. Aldcroft, 2025-06-01. Originally published in 1968, this important work covers a crucial period in Britain's economic history. In the three or four decades before the First World War, British industry was subject to increasing foreign competition, particularly from America and Germany. This book reviews the main developments in 10 industries, paying particular attention to the way in which they were affected by foreign competition and the measures taken to combat it. Each case is analysed in terms of how progressive the British industrialists were and to what extent they were willing to innovate or alter their methods to meet the new conditions. In cases where a lack of enterprise was clear, the contributors have tried to determine what the major factors were which governed the pace of innovation. The book will be of interest to economists, economic historians and sociologists as well as those interested in industrial innovation.

Computer analysis of images and patterns is a scientific field of longstanding tradition with roots in the early years of the computer era when electronic brains inspired scientists. Moreover, the design of vision machines is a part of humanity's dream of the artificial person. I remember the 2nd CAIP held in Wismar in 1987. Lectures were read in German, English, and Russian, and proceedings were also only partially written in English. The conference took place under a different political system and proved that ideas are independent of political walls. A few years later, the Berlin Wall collapsed, and Professors Sommer and Klette proposed a new formula for the CAIP: let it be held in Central and Eastern Europe every second year. There was a sense of solidarity with scientific communities in those countries that found themselves in a state of transition to a new economy. A well-implemented idea resulted in a chain of successful events in Dresden 1991, Budapest 1993, Prague 1995, Kiel 1997, and Ljubljana 1999. This year the conference was welcomed at Warsaw. There are three invited lectures and about 90 contributions written by more than 200 authors from 27 countries. Besides Poland, 60 authors, the largest representation comes from France (23), followed by England (16), Czech Republic (11), Spain (10), Germany (9), and Belarus (9). Regrettably, in spite of free registration fees and free accommodation for authors from former Soviet Union countries, we received only one accepted paper from Russia.

The United States Catalog Ida M. Lynn, 1928 A Text-book of the History of Doctrines Karl Rudolf Hagenbach, 1862 Competition Authorities in South Eastern Europe Boris Begović, Dušan V. Popović, 2018-07-20. This open access book provides answers to key open questions concerning competition policy in emerging economies with a focus on South Eastern Europe. The contributions address two major issues. One is the design of competition policy and the national competition authorities that enforce it, including the topics of competition advocacy and state aid control. The other is the use of economic methods in competition law enforcement, especially in the cases of relevant market definition and merger control. Many lessons learned in the countries of South Eastern Europe can be applied to the emerging markets of other regions. As such, the findings presented here will be highly relevant for officials and staff at national competition authorities, advisers to legislators shaping national competition policy, competition law professionals, and university students alike.

The United States Catalog Supplement, January 1918-June 1921 Eleanor E. Hawkins, 1921 European Competition Law Lorenzo Federico Pace, 2011-01-01. This timely book with contributions from prominent experts including Luis Ortiz Blanco, Valentine Korah, Ernst Joachim Mestmacker, Lorenzo F. Pace, and Richard Whish examines the novel aspects of the 2009 Guidance on Article 102. They present a critical assessment of the Guidance that could be relevant to the result of the ongoing Commission investigations, for example, the opened procedure against Google. Moreover, the contributing authors identify the differences between the Guidance and the prohibition of exclusionary abuses in some member states, including France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, and Spain, and reveal the ways in which the relevant national laws treat exclusionary abuses and assess how they differ from the approach of the Guidance. They also reveal the history and development of the relevant national legislation on prohibitions of unilateral conduct.

Europeanisation of Private Enforcement of Competition Law Gentjan Skara, 2022-04-06 This book argues that the European integration process Europeanisation is pushing the member states and candidate countries toward a greater convergence with the EU's competition acquis Through the transposition of the Directive 2014/104/EU the member states have harmonised substantive and procedural rules which is beneficial to individuals and enterprises because it provides a minimum protection across all member states In addition it is commonly agreed in academia that the prospect of EU membership brings positive domestic changes in the candidate countries At the moment Albania is waiting to open negotiations for the chapters of the EU acquis Firstly this book addresses the evolution of private enforcement at the European level by examining the objectives modalities and actors that contributed to the development of private enforcement Secondly it analyses the Directive 2014/104/EU and how the three selected EU member states have transposed the directive into their domestic legal system considering the discretion margin left by Article 288 TFEU and a minimum harmonisation level defined in the directive Thirdly it provides a historical overview of private enforcement in Albania and shows how the Albanian Competition Authority has addressed the transposition of the Directive 2014/104/EU
