Institutional Architectures to Improve Systems Operations and Management, 2012. The objective of this research was to undertake a comprehensive and systematic examination of the way agencies should be organized to successfully execute operations programs that improve travel time reliability. The following types of questions were examined at the outset of this research: How does operations fit into a transportation agency's overall program? What changes can be made in agency culture and training to promote operations? Which local and regional public agencies and private sector organizations are essential to the various aspects of operations Are there emerging technologies systems or organizational structures that can be used to advance intra agency and interagency communications and therefore operations The research addressed a large number of topics concerning organizational and institutional approaches that could enhance highway operations and travel time reliability The most fruitful investigation was identification of the Capability Maturity Model used extensively in the information technology field for organizational self assessment and continuous improvement of quality and reliability The researchers recognized that a version of the Capability Maturity Model could be developed and applied to highway operations and in turn travel time reliability Elements defining different levels of maturity include culture leadership organization and staffing resource allocation and partnerships Publisher s description A Sociological Perspective on Hierarchies in Educational Institutions Einav Argaman,2022-10-24 A Sociological Perspective on Hierarchies in Educational Institutions bridges the gap between theory and practice drawing together research from different perspectives without losing comprehensiveness accuracy and in depth coverage of hierarchy and educational institutions a novel contribution to Organizational Studies Human Resource Management and Technological Challenges Carolina Machado,J.
