Corporations in Evolving Diversity Masahiko Aoki, 2010-05-06 In this classic text Masahiko Aoki explores how the 2008 9 financial crisis demanded a re examination of the role of corporations and the working of financial markets around the world providing a compelling new analysis of the corporate firm the role of shareholders managers and workers and institutional governance structures In recent decades the firm has predominantly been seen as an organization run and governed in the interests of shareholders where management act as the agent of shareholders and the workers simply as instruments for share value maximization This book reverses this viewpoint It sees corporations as associational cognitive systems where cognitive actions are distributed amongst managers and workers with shareholders supplying cognitive tools and monitoring their use in the systems Aoki analyses the different relationships that can exist between shareholders managers and workers from this perspective and identifies a range of different models of organizational architecture and associated governance structures He also discusses ways in which corporations act as players in social political and organizational games as well as global economic games how these inter related social dynamics may change particular distinctive national structures into the diversity incorporated in the global corporate landscape and how they now call for new roles for financial markets

Corporate Governance in Contention Ciaran Driver, Grahame Thompson, 2018 Corporate governance is a complex idea that is often inappropriately simplified as a cookbook of recommended measures to improve financial performance Meta studies of published research show that the supposed benign effects of these measures independent directors or highly incentivised executives are at best context specific There is thus a challenge to explain the meaning purpose and importance of corporate governance This volume addresses these issues The issues discussed centre on relationships within the firm e g between labour managers and investors and relationships outside the firm that affect consumers or the environment The essays in this collection are the considered selection by the editors and the contributors themselves of what are seen as some of the most weighty and urgent issues that connect the corporation and society at large in developed economies with established property rights The essays are to be read in dialogue with each other giving a richer understanding than could be obtained by shepherding all contributions into a single mould Nevertheless taken together they demonstrate a shared sense of deep concern that the corporate governance agenda has been and still is on the wrong track The contributors individually and collectively identify in this compendium both a research programme and a platform for change
