Human Investment Management Prabhakaran Paleri, 2017-08-30 This book presents a thought provoking case for looking at human resource management from an entirely different perspective In the modern world organizations have to optimally manage resources to achieve the best results and the best way to do this is to identify humans as instruments of investment and not as resources Humans use resources in an activity Managing people as a subject was first studied as part of personnel management and became known as human resource management HRM in the early 80s However the basic principles remained largely unchanged The book argues that it is time that HRM is replaced by human investment management HIM where the entire approach of employee management in an organization shifts gears to human investment in activities In this approach no human is considered bad in relation to an organization if selected appropriately and trained well Everyone is productive though the returns may differ Humans can be invested in areas where they are best or can be trained to be the best according to various factors Unlike any other investment instruments humans value can be continuously upgraded for higher returns Thus the core of HIM is to maximize the return from each employee as an individual or as a member of the group with minimum expenditure and effort in him or her HIM can therefore reengineer and replace HRM slowly and steadily at the desired pace where maximum attention is paid to employee investment for improved results This is unlike HRM which primarily focuses on employee relations Turning around HRM to HIM will be the first step in inclusively aligning strategic human resource management with the overall human management As such HIM should be seen as a process by which the asset or capital value of individual humans can be increased by turning them into capital humans an entirely different outlook from the oft used term human capital

Developing Effective Policies for HIV/AIDS Education practice in Sub Saharan Africa: The Case of Urban Schools of Malawi: A synergy of pupils needs, policies and practice Paul Makochi, 2014-11-01 HIV/AIDS has been named the Sub Saharan disease. In countries that have achieved significant declines in HIV prevalence, young people have registered the biggest behavioural changes. It means they hold the keys not only to our understanding of the epidemic but more importantly to the efforts required to stem the tide of infections. However, the majority of young people are ignorant of how to prevent transmission, have low compliance to condom use, which is in some cases accentuated by misconceptions about HIV/AIDS transmission and have insufficient knowledge regarding transmission and avoidance behaviours. As such, consensus on feasible preventive interventions target young people, particularly those in schools. It is on this premise that the book unlocks the key pillars in effective HIV/AIDS education policies and practices. The study has drawn upon the experiences of selected Urban Schools in Malawi to explore the needs of young people in classroom, the extent to which the classroom practices respond to the needs and the factors influencing these using questionnaires, interviews, lesson observations and document analysis. Malawi typically represents most Sub Saharan African countries in terms of challenges faced by education systems. Given the similar cultural settings of the people of Sub Saharan Africa, the findings and recommendations of the study generalises to the education systems of Sub Saharan Africa to a greater extent. The book shows the need for open discussion climates on HIV/AIDS issues despite a conservative cultural and religious adult world that is not open. It has also identified a need for explicit and accurate knowledge on HIV/AIDS issues, opportunities to acquire behavioural skills for HIV prevention and involvement of external speakers in classroom HIV/AIDS education. Current classroom practice does not address the pupils' needs adequately. Factors influencing this can be linked to lack of policies responsive to culture and religion, ineffective and inadequate teaching policy guidelines and lack of a policy prioritising HIV/AIDS education. The findings suggest that in future, effective HIV/AIDS Education needs to be informed by the pupils' needs. To address these needs, support from the wider society and related policies coupled with appropriate management and classroom practice will be required. The book is therefore an indispensable tool for education systems in Sub Saharan Africa. It provides an effective model for
