Inner Voice For Public Administration:

An Inner Voice for Public Administration Nancy Murray, 1997-09-23 Murray seeks to demonstrate how Eastern philosophy can contribute to the development of Western public administration theory and practice. She views the end of the 20th century as an epoch making time in which the limitations of modern thought need to be examined. Murray shares the belief held by many public administration scholars that a reconceptualization of the field is in order. She contributes to that end by focusing on individual administrators and the problems they face as they continuously struggle to balance political exigencies and governmental processes in a society that simply does not understand. As caretakers of the public trust, administrators deserve a profession that provides a philosophy of administration designed to guide them in the maturation process that is essential to self development. Murray has chosen ideas and characters from the East as a guide to development of a philosophy of administration for individuals committed to public service. Coupled with certain Western teachings, particularly Jungian analytical psychology, this book inquires into the elevation of human thought and action. Murray challenges public administrators to aspire to their profession as to a higher calling. This will be of particular interest to scholars and researchers in public administration and to administrators as well. Transformational Public Service Cheryl King, Lisa Zanetti, 2014-12-18 Everyone who aspires to more effective public service should read this book. It provides a compelling antidote to the managerial focus of theory and practice in public administration. Written with the aim of inspiring and rekindling a mission for public service, Transformational Public Service weaves together theory and stories from actual practice to show that public service can and does advance the goals of democracy, inclusiveness, and social and economic justice. Eight practitioners from government and non governmental organizations at all levels, from the street to the executive office, tell their personal stories of transformational public service. Theory, poetry, and popular culture references are woven around the stories. Both students and practitioners will discover new ways of thinking in this book that will enable them to transform their own administrative practices. As the authors note in their prologue, "As we listened to these stories we heard people say that public service can be and is transformational, transforms institutions, practices, and people's lives and experiences in ways that serve democracy, engagement, and social and economic justice. The public service they practice is collaborative, humanistic, emancipatory, inclusive, and diverse." An Inner Voice for Public Administration Nancy Murray, 1997-09-23 Murray seeks to demonstrate how Eastern philosophy can contribute to the development of Western public administration theory and practice.
