The diagram illustrates the internal components of a Macintosh. On the left, a vertical black bar represents the system bus, with a series of colored horizontal lines (green, yellow, orange, red, purple, blue) indicating different data paths. A blue arrow points from the top of this bar towards the top of a large green gear. The green gear is labeled 'PowerPC System Software'. To the right of the green gear is a purple gear. Below the green gear is a blue gear. A large orange arc curves from the top of the green gear, passing over the purple gear, and ending at the top of the blue gear. The background is a light beige color with a subtle pattern of small, dark, irregular shapes.
