Horatio Joyce, 2018-10-18 Bringing together fourteen original essays this collection opens up new perspectives on the architectural history of the nineteenth century by examining the buildings of the period through the lens of experience With a focus on the experience of the ordinary building user rather than simply on the intentions of the designer the book shows that new and important insights can be brought to our understanding of Victorian architecture The chapters present a range of ideas and new research some examining individual building case studies from grand hotels and clubhouses in New York to the parliament buildings of Westminster and others exploring conceptual questions about the nature of architectural experience whether sensory or otherwise Yet they share the premise that the idea of the experience of architecture took on a new and particular significance with the rise of industrial modernity and they examine what contemporary people both architects and non architects understood by this idea The insights in this volume extend beyond the study of Victorian architecture Together they suggest how experience might be used as a framework to produce a more convincingly historical account of the artefacts of architectural history

The two volumes of this investigation into how we perceive sacred architecture propose an original interpretation of built environments as ritual architectural events Exploring the world's cultures and religious traditions Volume One maps out patterned responses to sacred architecture according to the human experience mechanism interpretation and comparison of architecture Volume Two an exercise in comparative morphology offers a comprehensive framework of ritual architectural priorities by looking at architecture as orientation as commemoration and as ritual context

The Experience of Architecture Henry Plummer, 2016-11-22

A thought provoking consideration of how architecture from a doorknob to a city plan can influence human behavior How does the experience of turning a door handle opening a door from one space into another affect us It is no wonder that the door one of the most elemental architectural forms has such metaphorical richness But even on a purely physical human level the cold touch of a brass handle or the swish of a sliding screen gives rise to an emotional reaction sometimes modest occasionally profound This book aims to understand how these everyday acts are influenced by architectural form a concept that is vital for all architects to grasp It considers how specifically built elements and volumes taken from a wide array of buildings and settings around the world can affect our powers of decision From hand carved stairs in Greek villages to free floating catwalks from the elegant processional steps of Renaissance Italy to Frank Lloyd Wright's masterly manipulation of form all provide very different experiences of stepping from one level to the next and all affect our experience of that space Seamlessly integrating text and image each chapter focuses on a different aspect of our daily interactions with architecture looking at stairs floors and paths moving interior spaces perception and perspective transparency and the relationship between a building and its setting This book is not just for architects and designers engaged in the production of space but for all those who seek a richer understanding of their place in the built world
