

YOU DEN ADDRESS

BY JOHN A. CORNELL, UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

W.J. YOU DEN – THE MAN AND HIS METHODOLOGY

Jack Youden

"Competitiveness Through Continuous Improvement" was the theme of this year's 36th Annual Fall Technical conference and that is why I selected the topic "Jack Youden – The Man and His Methodology" for this address. Jack Youden believed in continuous improvement; he spent his life improving the ways measurements are taken.

Once I had decided to talk about Jack Youden, I began to wonder, "Who was this person for whom

- an award on the topic of Interlaboratory Testing is given each year by the American Statistical Association;
- an address is presented at the Fall Technical Conference each year (and has been since 1973);
- an award (prize) is given by the Chemical and Process Industries Division of ASQC each year for the best expository paper on statistical methods or philosophy that appeared in Technometrics during the previous year; and,
- who was this man for whom the January 1972 issue of the Journal of Quality Technology was memorialized."

In what follows, I shall try to familiarize you with a brief biographical sketch of Jack Youden's life; present some examples of Jack Youden's methodology; give some measures of the impact of Jack Youden and his methodology on the scientific community; and finally, share some statements about Jack Youden made by those who worked and/or interacted with Jack Youden. Regrettably, I never had the good fortune of meeting Jack Youden in person.

A BRIEF BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH (1900-1971) OF JACK YOU DEN'S LIFE

As with so many others who have contributed much to our profession, Jack Youden began his career, not as a statistician, but rather in a related discipline, as a physical chemist. Born in Townsville, Australia, in 1900, Jack's family came to America in 1907 and resided in Niagara Falls, NY, where Jack attended the local public schools. During Jack's senior year of high school, the family moved to Rochester, NY, and the following year Jack enrolled at the University of Rochester. In 1921, Jack graduated with a B.S. in Chemical Engineering having been elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Following graduation Jack served a year as an instructor in chemistry at the University of Rochester and then enrolled at Columbia University as a graduate fellow in chemistry earning an M.A. in 1923 and a Ph.D. in 1924. Upon graduation, Jack joined the staff of the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research, located in Yonkers, NY, as a physical chemist. Thus, during the first third of his life, Jack showed an interest in and was formally trained in the field of chemistry.

The next seven years were a transition period in which Jack, a physical chemist, was slowly becoming more of a statistician. In 1931-32, Jack commuted from Yonkers to Morning Heights, NY to attend Professor H. Hotelling's lectures on Statistical Inference at Columbia University. And, while Jack was now assuming the role of a statistician more in his work, his laboratory experience was always to remain a treasured asset enabling him to communicate with scientists on their own grounds.
