Environmental Physiology and Biochemistry of Insects K. H. Hoffmann, 2012-12-06 Of all the zoological classes the insects are the most numerous in species and the most varied in structure Estimates of the number 18 of species vary from 1 to 10 million and 10 individuals are estimated to be alive at any given moment In their evolution insects are relatively ancient and therefore they have proved to be a phenomenally successful biological design which has survived unchanged in its basic winged form during the last 300 m y Insects were the first small animals to colonize the land with full success Their small size opened many more ecological niches to them and permitted a greater diversification than the vertebrates What is it about this design that has made insects so successful in habitats stretching from arid deserts to the Arctic and Antarctic and from freshwater brooks to hot springs and salines Is it due to the adaptability of their behavior physiology and biochemistry to changing environmental conditions Three features of insects are of particular importance in determining their physiological relationship with the environment their small size as mentioned above the impermeability and rigidity of their exoskeleton and their poikilothermy Of course as with any other animals the insects success in its environment depends on its ability to maintain its internal state within certain tolerable limits of temperature osmotic pressure pH or oxygen concentration homeostasis
