As organizations have grown in scale and scope of activities, so have social pressures on every aspect of organizational activity, from personnel policies to waste disposal practices. This volume is a rare example of a multidisciplinary approach to an important theoretical problem: the proper means of interorganizational decision making in light of these new pressures. This complex subject is here attacked by nineteen prominent behavioral scientists from a variety of disciplines. The study of interorganizational decision making is aimed at moving game situations from conditions of conflict or mixed conflict cooperation to conditions of pure cooperation. It seeks means of facilitating the coordination of decisions whenever interdependencies exist between the decision units. The book discusses variables which may affect decision making, including awareness of individual and collective payoffs, choice of an organizational structure, response of boundary personnel and the decision technology that exists to guide the decision makers. The book contains studies on all interorganizational decision making situations, including individual and joint decisions, those at the interface of government and business, and decision making at the international level. Contributions are balanced between quantitative building approaches and practical empirical applications, suggesting avenues for both theoretical and practical work in this new field. The book will be of profound interest to all behavioral and management scientists Inter-organizational Relations in International Security Stephen Aris, Aglaya Snetkov, Andreas Wenger, 2018-07-11

This book examines the politics of the relationships between multilateral organizations that have come to play a major role in contemporary efforts to manage international security. Drawing on concepts developed in Organizational Studies, the book starts from the assumption that inter-organizational relationships are the product of contested politics. Politics that may be either more cooperative or more competitive, but which always contains elements of both. This volume focuses on inter-organizational relations emanating from, through and towards the regional scale. The proliferation in the number of regional multilateral organizations in recent decades and their growing claims to represent effective and legitimate frameworks to address security threats and issues has been widely noted. The book is organized into four sections covering all aspects of the inter-organizational relationships in which regional multilateral organizations are involved: global, regional, intra-regional, inter-regional and multi-scalar. Each chapter addresses a distinct case study of inter-organizational relations: bilateral, trilateral or wider network, and examines the politics shaping these relations. This book will be of much interest to students of international security, international organizations, global
