

WHAT ARE THE 5 NEEDS OF INTERPERSONAL COMMUNICATION?

1. Information Sharing:

At its core, interpersonal communication is about exchanging information. This can range from everyday details to important news, helping us stay informed and make decisions.

2. Emotional Expression:

Communicating allows us to express our emotions, whether it's joy, anger, sadness, or love. This emotional expression is vital for mental health and maintaining strong personal connections.

3. Influence:

We often engage in interpersonal communication to influence others. This can be as simple as convincing a friend to try a new restaurant, or as complex as a business leader motivating their team.

4. Relationship Building:

Communication is key in building and maintaining relationships. Through interactions, we establish trust, understanding, and a sense of community with others.

5. Conflict Resolution:

Effective communication is essential for resolving conflicts. By discussing issues and expressing viewpoints, we can find common ground and solve problems in a constructive manner.
