Little Elephant And Big Mouse:

Little Elephant and Big Mouse Benita Cantieni, 1981 The friendship between a little elephant and a big mouse helps them to understand the size relationship between the sun and the Earth Modification Marcin Morzycki, 2015-11-12 Modifiers and modification have been a major focus of inquiry for as long as the formal study of semantics has existed and remain at the heart of major theoretical debates in the field Modification offers comprehensive coverage of a wide range of topics including vagueness and gradability comparatives and degree constructions the lexical semantics of adjectives and adverbs crosscategorical regularities and the relation between meaning and syntactic category Morzycki guides the reader through the varied and sometimes mysterious phenomena surrounding modification and the ideas that have been proposed to account for them Presenting disparate approaches in a consistent analytical framework this accessibly written work which includes an extensive glossary of technical terms is essential reading for researchers and students of all levels in linguistics the philosophy of language and psycholinguistics Trinitarian Intelligibility - an Analysis of Contemporary Discussions Jennifer Anne Herrick, 2007 The concern of this thesis is with the history of ideas specifically the history of recent theological ideas This thesis is not a work of systematic theology but rather situates discourse about a theological problem within the matrix of some relevant contemporary thought Its category then is the history of the development of ideas In the late twentieth century many academic theologians found the intelligibility of the traditional language used about the Christian Trinitarian God to be problematic This is the thesis research problem The research hypothesis is that these recent academic theologians sought to make trinitarian language used about the Christian Trinitarian God intelligible by replacing static definitions of person with a dynamic relational model The methodology of this thesis is essentially historical and hermeneutical It draws on the hermeneutical philosophy of language of Paul Ricoeur as it developed around two key notions his notion of text and his attention to the metaphorical process Data is drawn from representative recent trinitarian works of a significant and scholarly nature written in and for the western arena at the end of the twentieth century These sources are evaluated according to their ability in Ricoeur's language to redescribe the reality of the trinitarian symbol and refigure the world of contemporary Christian consciousness The thesis presents an investigation of western academic trinitarian theology in terms of a structure of analysis and synthesis Via an exploration of a series of responses made by these recent trinitarian theologians to categories of thought pertaining to the concept of person and their consequent theological appropriations this thesis demonstrates the research hypothesis It demonstrates that in recent trinitarian thought postmodern ideas on person as relational fuse with supportive biblical and derived patristic thought as theologians seek to make intelligible language used about the Christian Trinitarian God In particular the ancient concept of perichoresis is found by theologians to provide the necessary point of intersection With a redefinition of person relationally and in particular perichoretically the Christian God is understood in communal terms Renewed understanding of God as communal is a chief outcome of the use of the relational perichoretic model of person by theologians as they address their concern with trinitarian intelligibility The thesis demonstrates that when theologians redefine person in relational terms and particularly in perichoretic terms a redescription of the trinitarian symbol and a refiguration of Christian consciousness of trinitarian reality is seen to be possible Such a refigured consciousness constitutes an active reorganisation of Christian being in the world The implications of this reorganisation form the stuff of future trinitarian research and provide the motivation for this thesis research
