

THE INTERNAL PARASITES OF DOMESTIC ANIMALS

A MANUAL FOR VETERINARY SURGEONS

by

THOMAS W. M. CAMERON

T.D., M.A., M.D., D.Sc., M.R.C.V.S.

Research Professor of Parasitology, McGill University
Director, Institute of Parasitology, Macdonald College, Canada

Professor Cameron is outstanding among the few authorities who could meet the demand for a textbook on parasitology useful alike to veterinary practitioners and to students. As lecturer in helminthology at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, in the University of Edinburgh, and at the Royal (Dick) Veterinary College, as well as in his present position, he has taught protozoology and helminthology to both graduate and undergraduate students in England, Scotland, and Canada. His book is admirably arranged with clarity and method, and he discusses only those species of known economic importance or of common occurrence. An introductory chapter deals with the nomenclature and the history of the subject; in the two main sections the protozoa and the helminths are discussed in their various groups and sub-groups; and final chapters treat of immunity and serology, therapeutics of helminthic infections, and technique, concluding with valuable host lists and a selective bibliography. The illustrations are from microphotographs and from carefully prepared drawings, which include ingenious pictorial diagrams of the life-cycles of different species in relation to host and habitat.
