

FROM BIG TO SMALL DINOSAURS OF ALL SIZES

The word "dinosaur" almost certainly brings to mind roving reptiles with gigantic bodies and a backbone that made the earth tremble with every step. In reality, colored dinosaurs have certainly lived on our planet in the past, but many of them also were close to one of the most familiar animals of today.

Which one was the biggest?
And which one was the smallest?
Figuring out the numbers
is not so simple.

THE CARNIVORES

The existence of huge prey meant that even the largest predators could be fed.

LENGTH

How do you calculate the size of a dinosaur? Following the length of a dinosaur might seem very simple: you just measure its skeleton. However, because dinosaurs have been extinct for billions of years, scientists very rarely have complete skeletons to study. As a result, their size can only be estimated by measuring the (often several) bones found.

Among the dinosaurs, there were also miniature specimens such as Archaeopteryx and Parasaurus, which is considered the smallest dinosaur known to man.
