Lart Medieval En Irlande:

The Rood in Medieval Britain and Ireland, C.800-c.1500 Philippa Turner, Jane Hawkes, 2020 New readings demonstrate the centrality of the rood to the visual material and devotional cultures of the Middle Ages its richness and complexity The rood was central to medieval Christianity and its visual culture Christ's death on the cross was understood as the means by which humankind was able to gain salvation and depictions of the cross and Christ's death upon it were ubiquitous This volume brings together contributions offering a new perspective on the medieval rood understood in its widest sense as any kind of cross within the context of Britain and Ireland over a wide period of time which saw significant political and cultural change In doing so it crosses geographical chronological material and functional boundaries which have traditionally characterised many previous discussions of the medieval rood Acknowledging and exploring the capacity of the rood to be both universal and specific to particular locations and audiences these contributions also tease out the ways in which roods related to one another as well as how they related to their physical and cultural surroundings often functioning in dialogue with other images and the wider devotional topography both material and mental in which they were set The chapters consider roods in a variety of media and contexts the monumental stone crosses of early medieval England twelfth century Ireland and spreading further afield late medieval Galicia the three dimensional monumental wooden roods in English monasteries Irish friaries and East Anglian parish churches roods that fit in the palm of a hand encased in precious metals those that were painted on walls drawn on the pages of manuscripts and those that appeared in visions dreams and gesture related to one another as well as how they related to their physical and cultural surroundings often functioning in dialogue with other images and the wider devotional topography both material and mental in which they were set The chapters consider roods in a variety of media and contexts the monumental stone crosses of early medieval England twelfth century Ireland and spreading further afield late medieval Galicia the three dimensional monumental wooden roods in English monasteries Irish friaries and East Anglian parish churches roods that fit in the palm of a hand encased in precious metals those that were painted on walls drawn on the pages of manuscripts and those that appeared in visions dreams and gesture related to one another as well as how they related to their physical and cultural surroundings often functioning in dialogue with other images and the wider devotional topography both material and mental in which they were set The chapters consider roods in a variety of media and contexts the monumental stone crosses of early medieval England twelfth century Ireland and spreading further afield late medieval Galicia the three dimensional monumental wooden roods in English monasteries Irish friaries and East Anglian parish churches roods that fit in the palm of a hand encased in precious metals those that were painted on walls drawn on the pages of manuscripts and those that appeared in visions dreams and gesture

Studies in Early Christian and Medieval Irish Art: Enamels and metalwork Françoise Henry, Geneviève Marsh-Micheli, 1983 Over the past fifty years Francoise Henry has been the leading authority on the history of early Irish art A pupil of Henri Focillon she united two traditions of scholarship one French and one Irish and her understanding of the European context within which the art of early Christian Ireland developed has had a profound influence on subsequent research These three volumes bring together the articles that Dr Henry published on Irish art and its European links The first volume is concerned with enamel and metalwork a field in which the author specialized from the beginning Emailliers d Occident looks at Western enamels among which the Irish examples figure prominently and the development of Irish enamelling is treated separately in the following study Metalwork is also featured in the form of a number of Dr Henry s important studies on hanging bowls croziers and chalices The second volume deals with Irish manuscript illumination Since a number of the articles reprinted here were published in collaboration with Genevieve Marsh Micheli this volume as Francoise Henry wished is published as a joint work and includes an independent article by Mrs Marsh Micheli on the Irish manuscripts of St Gall and Reichenau The manuscripts dealt with here cover the entire span of Christian Celtic art in Ireland from the earliest works of the seventh and eighth centuries to the later manuscripts of the period between the Norman Conquest and the final collapse of Gaelic civilisation in Ireland in the late sixteenth century There are joint studies of Irish manuscripts in Continental and English collections and a valuable review by Francoise Henry of the facsimile edition of the Book of Lindisfarne The third volume of Francoise Henry s Studies features her papers on early Christian architecture and sculpture in Ireland They include one of the author s earliest contributions Les origines de l iconographie irlandaise and the subject of Irish sculpture particularly the high crosses and cross slabs remained one of Francoise Henry s main interests Her list of dated inscriptions on early Irish graveslabs helps to provide a chronology for this type of monument that is of unique value The author s studies of the monastic sites represent a particularly valuable contribution to the archaeology of early Christian Ireland This comprises the results of nearly fifty years of field work in some of the more inaccessible areas of Ireland Two of the papers reprinted here carry the study of Irish sculpture into the post Norman period with notes on the carved decoration of the Irish Cistercian monasteries and a figure in Lismore Cathedral

Martin, Francis John Byrne, 1976 In this first volume of the Royal Irish Academy's multi volume A New History of Ireland a wide range of national and international scholars in every field of study have produced studies of the archaeology art culture geography geology history language law literature music and related topics that include surveys of all previous scholarship combined with the latest research findings to offer readers the first truly comprehensive and authoritative account of Irish history from the dawn of time down to the coming of the Normans in 1169 Included in the volume is a comprehensive bibliography of all the themes discussed in the narrative together with copious illustrations and maps and a thorough index

The Sixth Century Richard Hodges, William Bowden, 1997-12-31 In his assessment of the transformation of the Roman World Henri Pirenne assigned little significance to the sixth century seeing it primarily as a period of continuity In this volume twelve scholars assess the period in the light of new evidence and new perspectives The result is an infinitely complex picture covering Scandinavia and Central Europe as well as the western Mediterranean in which continuity and change exist side by side
