English For Science:

Does Science Need a Global Language? Scott L. Montgomery, 2013-05-06 In early 2012 the global scientific community erupted with news that the elusive Higgs boson had likely been found providing potent validation for the Standard Model of how the universe works Scientists from more than one hundred countries contributed to this discovery proving beyond any doubt that a new era in science had arrived an era of multinationalism and cooperative reach Globalization the Internet and digital technology all play a role in making this new era possible but something more fundamental is also at work In all scientific endeavors lies the ancient drive for sharing ideas and knowledge and now this can be accomplished in a single tongue English But is this a good thing In Does Science Need a Global Language Scott L Montgomery seeks to answer this question by investigating the phenomenon of global English in science how and why it came about the forms in which it appears what advantages and disadvantages it brings and what its future might be He also examines the consequences of a global tongue considering especially emerging and developing nations where research is still at a relatively early stage and English is not yet firmly established Throughout the book he includes important insights from a broad range of perspectives in linguistics history education geopolitics and more Each chapter includes striking and revealing anecdotes from the front line experiences of today's scientists some of whom have struggled with the reality of global scientific English He explores topics such as student mobility publication trends world Englishes language endangerment and second language learning among many others What he uncovers will challenge readers to rethink their assumptions about the direction of contemporary science as well as its future

The Dominance of English as a Language of Science Ulrich Ammon, 2001 The text shows to what degree English is now the dominant language of science It gives a world wide overview of various countries on all continents aiming beyond description at explanation and even prediction of future developments
