Enhancing Dynamic Command And Control Of Air Operations Against Time Critical Targets :

Enhancing Dynamic Command and Control of Air Operations Against Time Critical Targets ,2002 During the 1990s air operations in Southwest Asia and the Balkans against mobile air defenses tactical ballistic missiles and their launch means and fielded forces operating in small units and intermingled with civilian populations served to highlight shortfalls in U S dynamic command and control and battle management DC2BM The objective of this study is to help the Air Force improve DC2BM of intelligence surveillance and reconnaissance assets and weapon systems in air operations against adversaries that are increasingly employing asymmetrical strategies and denial and deception techniques and leveraging advances in technologies to reduce exposure of many of their critical military systems to U S air assets The focus of this study is on the ability of the Air Force to effectively attack time critical targets TCTs and the extent to which its successes and failures in this area can be attributed to dynamic command and control and battle management capabilities or their lack Specifically the study identifies key DC2BM functions and capabilities necessary to conduct operations against TCTs surveys new DC2BM programs and initiatives to determine whether they provide the desired capabilities and develops suggested actions to address identified shortfalls Enhancing Dynamic Command and Control of Air Operations Against Time Critical Targets Myron Hura,Jacobs Hura,Gary McLeod,Richard Mesic,Jody Jacobs,Philip S. Sauer,2002 During the 1990s U S air operations produced disappointing results against adversary mobile forces that employed camouflage concealment and deception techniques and shoot and scoot tactics This report summarizes research intended to help the Air Force develop enhanced dynamic command and control and battle management DC2BM of intelligence surveillance and reconnaissance assets and shooter assets in air operations against such time critical targets TCTs It identifies four mission areas in which existing DC2BM capabilities are inadequate counterair operations against cruise missiles theater missile defense counterforce operations against tactical ballistic missile transporter erector launchers suppression of enemy air defenses in the context of strike missions against targets defended by advanced air defenses and interdiction of small unit ground forces intermingled with the civilian population The authors conclude that DC2BM improvements should focus on 1 refining concepts of operations and tactics techniques and procedures and developing an end to end scalable functionality for operations against TCTs 2 building a robust collaborative distributed environment 3 extensively automating the applications for performing DC2BM functions and 4 synchronizing the new applications with a Web enabled integrated software Theater Battle Management Core System Air Force Magazine ,2007 Implications of Modern Decision Science for Military Decision-support Systems Paul K. Davis,Jonathan Kulick,Michael Egner,2005 A selective review of modern decision science and implications for decision support systems The study suggests ways to synthesize lessons from research on heuristics and biases with those from naturalistic research It also discusses modern tools such as increasingly realistic simulations multiresolution modeling and exploratory analysis which can assist decisionmakers in choosing strategies that are flexible
