Football, Place and National Identity David Storey, 2021-10-19 Given its popularity international football might be viewed as a prism through which the imagined community of the nation becomes closer to a manifest reality with matches providing examples of that community collectively rejoicing or crying The sport potentially sheds insights on the complexities of ethnic and national identity as it is a medium through which allegiances are re produced and expressed Alongside the internationalisation of club teams international representative teams also appear to be becoming more trans national with players born outside that country but with family connections to it playing in the national colours Increasing flexibility of regulations governing international representation means that countries can potentially select from a considerably broader pool of talent drawing on players with ethnic or cultural connections to the country For example for a number of decades now the Republic of Ireland team has included sizeable numbers of non Irish born players sons and grandsons of Irish emigrants Similar tendencies are clear in the selection of English born players of West Indian origin for football teams representing Caribbean countries Colonial connections and related migration flows explain France s selection of players born in places such as Algeria or Morocco but brought up in France The successful French teams of the late 1990s and early 2000s drew heavily on players from a multiplicity of ethnic and geographic origins Conversely many African countries select French born players of African origin thereby reclaiming some of the sons of their extensive diasporas and a sizeable number of players born in Europe have competed in the Africa Cup of Nations in recent years In this way historical colonial relationships and associated migration flows provide the backdrop to the more eclectic nature of national representative teams Elsewhere this amalgamation of both civic and ethnic senses of national identity has allowed teams like Turkey and Croatia to tap into their extensive emigrant pool This book focuses on one dimension of the intricate connections between football place and politics It investigates the switching of national sporting allegiance by some footballers from their country of birth to country of residency or family origins examines the reasons behind the recent growth of the phenomenon and explores reactions to this Strangers to that Land Andrew Hadfield, John McVeagh, 1994 Strangers to that Land is a critical anthology of English Scottish and Welsh colonists and travelers accounts of Ireland and the Irish from the sixteenth to the nineteenth centuries from the Reformation to the Famine The anthology consists exclusively of eyewitness descriptions of Ireland given by writers using English who had never been to Ireland before and were seeing the country for the first time Each extract where necessary is set in context and briefly explained The result is a vivid continuous record of Ireland as defined and judged by the British over a period of four centuries Ireland and Britain, 1170-1450 Robin Frame, 1998-07-01 In this collection of essays Robin Frame concentrates upon two themes the place of the Lordship of Ireland within the Plantagenet state and the interaction of settler society and English government in the culturally hybrid frontier world of later medieval Ireland itself As a prelude to both these themes Ireland and Britain 1170-1450 begins with a discussion of why the first English conquest of Ireland has been viewed as a failure The first group of essays addresses such topics as the changing character of the aristocratic networks that bound Ireland to Britain the impact of the Scottish invasion led by Edward and Robert Bruce in the early fourteenth century the identity of the English political community that emerged in Ireland by the reign of Edward III and the case for a broadly conceived English history incorporating rather than excluding the English of Ireland The subsequent group explores the character of Irish warfare the adaptation of English institutions to a marcher environment the exercise of power by regional magnates and the complex practical interactions between royal government and Gaelic Irish leaders Dance Rhythm's Tunes: Roots and
