Food + Architecture Karen A. Franck, 2003-01-27 Much of the built world is designed around food for storing producing transporting selling serving and eating We recognise the regeneration of a neighbourhood through its new cafes restaurants and grocery shops This title features new restaurants in London New York Sydney and Tokyo the design of markets provocative essays by architects historians and social scientists and interviews with designers and entrepreneurs

Food and Architecture Subhadip Majumder, Sounak Majumder, 2020-10-02 Food and architecture the two pillars of human civilization have intertwined to such extents to sustain the civilization itself that the connection between the two has visually ceased to exist. The apparent diverse fields of human life have worked upon similar principles through ages from the beginning of mankind and they complemented our existence. Food is fundamental to cross cultural studies of behavior, thought, and imagery. We eat for many reasons than just to satisfy our appetite. The act of eating is now a way of socializing with others. Hence all major institutes of food service are trying hard to amaze their users with a built environment that complements the served delicacy. Although most of the users might not understand the thought consciously but subconscious mind keeps alarming when things don't fall in place. The book surfs through all the aspects of such two diverse fields and tries to show a parallel through a very socialistic and holistic perspective. It's interesting to understand the intangible logics behind the very tangible aspects of human life.

The Food Axis Elizabeth C. Cromley, 2010 Beginning with the earliest and relatively simple houses the author traces changes in food spaces through the years noting a steady escalation in the number of food related rooms. Along the way she considers multiple circumstances that shed light on this evolution including the role of gender in determining food space design, the relation of food spaces to nature and the telling ways in which people and food circulate through kitchens and dining rooms. Because Cromley is interested not only in how designed spaces look but how they are used she cites a wealth of primary sources: autobiographies, travel journals, household diaries, letters, and inventories in her exploration of the habits surrounding all aspects of food in the home.

Food City CJ Lim, 2014-04-16 In Food City a companion piece to Smartcities and Eco Warriors innovative architect and urban designer CJ Lim explores the issue of urban transformation and how the creation, storage, and distribution of food has been and can again become a construct for the practice of everyday life. Food City investigates the reinstatement of food at the core of national and local governance, how it can be a driver to restructure employment, education, transport, tax, health, culture, communities, and the justice system, re-evaluating how the city functions as a spatial and political entity. Global in scope Food City first addresses the frameworks of over 25 international cities through the medium of food and how the city is governed. It then provides a case study through drawings, models, and text exploring how a secondary infrastructure could function as a living environmental and food system operating as a sustainable stratum over the city of London. This case study raises serious questions about the priorities of our governing bodies using architectural relationships to reframe the spaces of food consumption and production analyzed through historical precedent, function, and form. This study of the integration of food, architecture, and the development of future cities will both inspire professionals and students in the fields of urban design and architecture.

The Architect, the Cook and Good Taste Petra Hagen Hodgson, Rolf Toyka, 2007-03-29 Since time immemorial cooking and building have been among humanity's most basic occupations. Both of them are rooted in necessity but both of them also possess a cultural as well as a sensory aesthetic dimension And while it is true that cooking is a transitory art form it gives expression to the periods of human cultural history just as architecture does Moreover both arts accord a central role to the materials employed Both involve measuring and proportioning shaping and designing assembling and composing This book pursues the astonishing parallels and deeply rooted connections between the art of building and that of cooking A variety of essays takes up questions of materiality and proportioning Attention will also be given to food cultivation and architecture to the places where meals are prepared as well as a range of different culinary spaces With articles by Annette Gigon Stanislaus von Moos Claudio Silvestrin Ian Ritchie and others

Foods David Julian McClements, 2019-04-29 We are in the midst of an unprecedented era of rapid scientific and technological advances that are transforming the way our foods are produced and consumed Food architecture is being used to construct healthier tastier and more sustainable foods Functional foods are being created to combat chronic diseases such as obesity cancer diabetes stroke and heart disease These foods are fortified with nutraceuticals or probiotics to improve our mood performance and health The behavior of foods inside our guts is being controlled to increase their healthiness Precision nutrition is being used to tailor diets to our unique genetic profiles microbiomes and metabolisms Gene editing nanotechnology and artificial intelligence are being used to address modern food challenges such as feeding the growing global population reducing greenhouse gas emissions reducing waste and improving sustainability However the application of these technologies is facing a backlash from consumers concerned about the potential risks posed to human and environmental health Some of the questions addressed in this book are What is food architecture How does sound and color impact taste Will we all have 3D food printers in all our homes Should nanotechnology and gene editing be used to enhance our foods Are these new technologies safe Would you eat bug foods if it led to a more sustainable food supply Should vegetarians eat themselves Can nutraceuticals and probiotics stop cancer What is the molecular basis of a tasty sustainable burger David Julian McClements is a Distinguished Professor in food science who has used physics chemistry and biology to improve the quality safety and healthiness of foods for over 30years He has published over 900 scientific articles and 10 books in this area and is currently the most highly cited food scientist in the world He has won numerous scientific awards for his work The aim of this book is to highlight the many exciting advances being made in the science of foods and to show their application for solving important problems related to the modern food supply such as tackling chronic diseases feeding a global population reducing food waste and creating healthier and tastier foods Architecture for a New Food System Emily Marie Gasperetti,2013 This thesis seeks to explore the impact that architecture can have on peoples relationship with food The industrialization of American society over the past two centuries has distance people from the source of their food this distance has significantly contributed to an overall decreased in American health The concept of this thesis is that architecture can have a positive impact on peoples relationship with food and thereby help improve the health of a community I chose a site on the outskirts of Glens Falls New York to locate my project the Glens Falls Good Foods Collective This site is ideal for bringing people and food together as a few miles to the West lays the city center while abundant farmlands fan out toward the East The Collective combines small scale food processing facilities for farmers with a market place for consumers Providing an environment in which these ever distancing demographics can interact would help reduce the gap between people and food The goal of this thesis is to design a building that fosters a meaningful and productive connection to food by bringing people closer to its source Food Dal Cucchiaio Al Mondo. Ediz. Inglese P. Ciorra,A. Rosati,2015 Food + Architecture Ashley Sherman,University of North Carolina at Charlotte.
