

BOOK REVIEWS

Household Decisions, Gender, and Development: A Synthesis of Recent Research, edited by Agnes R. Quisumbing. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 2003. 274 pp. ISBN-13: 978-0-89629-717-3, ISBN-10: 0-89629-717-9 (pbk.). US$17.95.

The body of work summarized in this edited volume represents one of the most significant contributions to the “mainstreaming” of one branch of feminist economics, intrahousehold analysis, to date. The book, designed as a “reader” in the sense that most of the chapters are relatively brief summaries of longer and more detailed papers, synthesizes twenty-seven empirical studies on intrahousehold resource allocation carried out over a roughly ten-year period by the International Food Policy Research Institute (IFPRI). The overarching theme of the book is that, at the level of the household, gender-specific bargaining power and the distribution of resources matter greatly for economic development, including agricultural productivity, child health and nutrition, and educational outcomes.

Following an introductory chapter by the editor, the volume is divided into five sections: (1) Power and Resources within the Household; (2) Agriculture and Natural Resources; (3) Health and Nutrition; (4) Social Capital, Legal Institutions, and Property Rights; and (5) Policies and Interventions.

The five chapters in the first part are devoted to developing and testing empirically tractable measures of intrahousehold bargaining power across a wide range of countries. In one particularly noteworthy chapter in this section, Chapter 4, “Measuring Power,” Elizabeth Frankenberg and Duncan Thomas discuss the development of a decision-making module as part of the second Indonesia Family Life Survey, a large-scale, multipurpose household survey. Drawing on ethnographic literature and focus group discussions, the authors designed a survey instrument administered to both husbands and wives that dealt with money management, decision-making over expenditures and time use, and the relative status of men and women within the household. The chapter also reports some initial results on the determinants of individual decision-making

Quisumbing, Bonnie Folger McClafferty, 2006 Women's Empowerment and Nutrition Mara van den Bold, Agnes R. Quisumbing, Stuart Gillespie, 2013-11-01 Many development programs that aim to alleviate poverty and improve investments in human capital consider women's empowerment a key pathway by which to achieve impact and often target women as their main beneficiaries Despite this women's empowerment dimensions are often not rigorously measured and are at times merely assumed This paper starts by reflecting on the concept and measurement of women's empowerment and then reviews some of the structural interventions that aim to influence underlying gender norms in society and eradicate gender discrimination It then proceeds to review the evidence of the impact of three types of interventions cash transfer programs agricultural interventions and microfinance programs on women's empowerment nutrition or both Qualitative evidence on conditional cash transfer CCT programs generally points to positive impacts on women's empowerment although quantitative research findings are more heterogeneous CCT programs produce mixed results on long term nutritional status and very limited evidence exists of their impacts on micronutrient status The little evidence available on unconditional cash transfers UCT indicates mixed impacts on women's empowerment and positive impacts on nutrition however recent reviews comparing CCT and UCT programs have found little difference in terms of their effects on stunting and they have found that conditionality is less important than other factors such as access to healthcare and child age and sex Evidence of cash transfer program impacts depending on the gender of the transfer recipient or on the conditionality is also mixed although CCTs with non health conditionalities seem to have negative impacts on nutritional status The impacts of programs based on the gender of the transfer recipient show mixed results but almost no experimental evidence exists of testing gender differentiated impacts of a single program Agricultural interventions specifically home gardening and dairy projects show mixed impacts on women's empowerment measures such as time workload and control over income but they demonstrate very little impact on nutrition Implementation modalities are shown to determine differential impacts in terms of empowerment and nutrition outcomes With regard to the impact of microfinance on women's empowerment evidence is also mixed although more recent reviews do not find any impact on women's empowerment The impact of microfinance on nutritional status is mixed with no evidence of impact on micronutrient status Across all three types of programs cash transfer programs agricultural interventions and microfinance programs very little evidence exists on pathways of impact and evidence is often biased toward a particular region The paper ends with a discussion of the findings and remaining evidence gaps and an outline of recommendations for research Women's Empowerment in Agriculture Esha Sraboni, Hazel J. Malapit, Agnes R. Quisumbing, Akhter U. Ahmed, 2013-11-01 Women's low status and persistent gender gaps in health and education in South Asia contribute to chronic child malnutrition Smith et al 2003 and food insecurity von

Grebmer et al 2009 even as other determinants of food security such as per capita incomes have improved This is particularly relevant for Bangladesh where chronic food insecurity continues to be an important issue despite steady advances in food production To be able to leverage agriculture as an engine of inclusive growth there is a need to develop indicators for measuring women s empowerment examine its relationship to various food security outcomes and monitor the impact of interventions to empower women Using nationally representative survey data from Bangladesh we examine the relationship between women s empowerment in agriculture and two measures of household food security per adult equivalent calorie availability and dietary diversity We use the Women s Empowerment in Agriculture Index to assess the extent of women s empowerment in agriculture and instrumental variables techniques to correct for the potential endogeneity of empowerment We find that the overall women s empowerment score the number of groups in which women actively participate women s control of assets and a narrowing gap in empowerment between men and women within households are positively associated with calorie availability and dietary diversity

The Feminist Economics of Trade Irene van Staveren, Diane Elson, Caren Grown, Nilufer Cagatay, 2012-08-06 Unravelling the complex relationship between gender inequality and trade this is the first book to combine the tools of economic and gender analysis to examine the relationship between international trade and gender relations It brings together fourteen contributions from a variety of economic perspectives including structuralist institutionalist neoclassical and Post Keynesian by a range of authors including Lourdes Bener a William Darity Marzia Fontana and Mariama Williams to demonstrate what feminist economics has contributed to the analysis of international trade through theoretical modelling econometric analysis and policy oriented contributions It includes evidence from industrialized semi industrialized and agrarian economies using country case studies and cross country analysis Arguing that trade expansion and reduction of gender inequality can be combined but only if an appropriate mix and sequence of trade and other economic policies is implemented this book is key reading for all students of international economics gender and cultural studies and politics and international relations amongst other disciplines

Pender, Arie Kuyvenhoven, 2007 Printbegr nsninger Der kan printes 10 sider ad gangen og max 40 sider pr session

Women, Livestock Ownership and Markets Jemimah Njuki, Elizabeth Waithanji, Joyce Lyimo-Macha, Juliet Kariuki, Samuel Mburu, 2013-10-23 This book provides empirical evidence from Kenya Tanzania and Mozambique and from different production systems of the importance of livestock as an asset to women and their participation in livestock and livestock product markets It explores the issues of intra household income management and economic benefits of livestock markets to women focusing on how types of markets the types of products and women s participation in markets influence their access to livestock income The book further analyses the role of livestock ownership especially women s ownership of livestock in influencing household food security though increasing household dietary diversity and food adequacy Additional issues addressed include access to resources information and financial services to enable women more effectively to participate in livestock production and marketing and some of the factors that influence this access Practical strategies for increasing women s market participation and access to information and services are discussed The book ends with recommendations on how to mainstream gender in livestock research and development if livestock are to serve as a pathway out of poverty for the poor and especially for women

Africa's Big Men Kenneth Kalu, Olajumoke Yacob-Haliso, Toyin Falola, 2018-03-20 This book spotlights analyzes and explains varying forms and patterns of state society relations on the African continent taking as point of departure the complexities created by the emergence proliferation and complicated interactions of so called big men across Africa s fifty four states The contributors interrogate the evolution of Africa s big men the role of the big men in Africa s political and economic development and the relationship between the state the big men and the citizens Throughout the chapters the contributors engage with a number of questions from different disciplinary and methodological orientations How did these states evolve to exhibit various deformities in their composition functioning and in their relations with the societies that they govern What roles did Atlantic and other slavery and European colonialism play in creating states that are unable to display the right and good relationships with citizens in civil society Why did these forms of predatory state society relations continue to thrive in Africa after the end of Atlantic slave trade and subsequent colonialism Why did the emerging African leaders at independence fail to effectively dismantle the structures of exploitation and expropriation that were the defining features of slavery and colonialism Who are Africa s big men and what are their trajectories This book is essential reading for all students and scholars of African politics public policy and administration political economy and democratisation

Securing food for all in Bangladesh Ahmed, Akhter, ed., Islam, Nurul, ed., Mujeri, Mustafa K., ed., 2021-11-05 Securing Food for All in Bangladesh presents an array of research that collectively address four broad issues 1 agricultural technology adoption 2 input use and agricultural productivity 3 food security and output market and 4 poverty food security and women s empowerment The fifteen chapters of the book address diverse aspects within these four themes Access to sufficient food by all people at all times to meet their dietary needs is a matter of critical importance Despite declining arable agricultural land Bangladesh has made commendable progress in boosting domestic food production The growth in overall food production has been keeping ahead of population growth resulting in higher per capita availability of food over time In the early 1970s Bangladesh was a food deficit country with a population of about 75 million Today the population is 165 million and the country is now self sufficient in rice production which has tripled over the past three decades Along with enhanced food production increased income has improved people s access to food Furthermore nutritional outcomes have improved significantly Nevertheless the challenges to food and nutrition security remain formidable Future agricultural growth and food and nutrition security are threatened by population growth worsening soil fertility diminishing access to land and other scarce natural resources increasing vulnerability of crop varieties to pests and diseases and persistent poverty leading to poor access to food In addition the impacts of climate change an increase in the incidence of natural disasters sea intrusion and salinity will exacerbate food and nutrition insecurity in the coming decades if corrective measures are not taken Aligned with this context the authors of the book explore policy options and strategies for developing agriculture and improving food security in Bangladesh Securing Food for All in Bangladesh with its breadth and scope will be an invaluable resource for policymakers researchers and students dedicated to improving people s livelihoods in Bangladesh

The State of the World's Children 2007 UNICEF.,2006 The State of the World s Children 2007 reports on the lives of women around the world because gender equality and the well being of children go hand in hand When women are empowered to live full and productive lives children prosper and UNICEF s experience also shows the opposite When women are denied equal opportunity within a society children suffer The report is divided into five sections a call for equality equality in the household equality in employment equality in politics and government reaping the double dividend of gender equality

Intrahousehold preference heterogeneity and demand for labor-saving agricultural technology: The case of mechanical rice transplanting in India Kajal Gulati,Patrick S. Ward,Travis J. Lybbert,David J.

Spielman,2019-10-30 Evaluations of agricultural technologies rarely consider how adoption may alter the labor allocation of different household members We examine intrahousehold decision making dynamics that shape smallholder agricultural households decision to hire in mechanical rice transplanting MRT a technology that reduces demand for labor To study the adoption decision we employ an experimental approach to estimating the willingness to pay for MRT services both at the level of individual men and women within the same households as well as at the overall household level We find that women value MRT more than men but this difference in valuation is not driven by differences in their individual characteristics but primarily by differences in preferences Although women value MRT more than men they have less influence over the ultimate technology adoption decision In households with women working as outside hired laborers the intrahousehold differences in MRT valuation disappear suggesting that women value MRT as a means of reallocating on farm labor to other unpaid family work Labor saving mechanization such as MRT may have important implications for rural labor markets and on the gendered division of labor within agricultural households

Gender in Agriculture Agnes R. Quisumbing,Ruth Meinzen-Dick,Terri L. Raney,André Croppenstedt,Julia A. Behrman,Amber Peterman,2014-04-29 The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations FAO produced a 2011 report on women in agriculture with a clear and urgent message agriculture underperforms because half of all farmers women lack equal access to the resources and opportunities they need to be more productive This book builds on the report s conclusions by providing for a non specialist audience a compendium of what we know now about gender gaps in agriculture

Rethinking New Womanhood Nazia Hussein,2018-04-09 Covering India Bangladesh Pakistan and Nepal Rethinking New Womanhood effectively introduces a new wave of gender research from South Asia that resonates with feminist debates around the world The volume conceptualises new womanhood as a complex heterogeneous and intersectional identity By deconstructing classification systems and highlighting women s everyday ongoing negotiations with boundaries of social categories the book reconfigures the concept of new woman as a symbolic identity denoting modern femininity at the intersection of gender class culture sexuality and religion in South Asia The collection maps new sites and expressions on women and gender studies around nationhood women s rights transnational feminist solidarity new girlhoods aesthetic and sexualised labour respectability and modernity LGBT discourses domestic violence and new feminisms The volume will be of interest to students and scholars across a range of disciplines including gender studies sociology education media and cultural studies literature anthropology history development studies postcolonial studies and South Asian studies

Bargaining power and biofortification: The role of gender in adoption of orange sweet potato in Uganda Gilligan, Daniel O.,Kumar, Neha,McNiven, Scott,Meenakshi, J.V.,Quisumbing, Agnes R.,2014-06-13

We examine the role of gender in adoption and diffusion of orange sweet potato a biofortified staple food crop being promoted as a strategy to increase dietary intakes of vitamin A among young children and adult women in Uganda As an agricultural intervention with nutrition objectives intrahousehold gender dynamics regarding decisions about crop choice and child feeding practices may play a role in adoption decisions Also most households access sweet potato vines through informal exchange suggesting again that gender dimensions of networks may be important to diffusion of the crop We use data from an experimental impact evaluation of the introduction of OSP in Uganda to study how female bargaining power measured by share of land and nonland assets controlled by women affect adoption and diffusion decisions

Conserving Land, Protecting Water Deborah Bossio,Kim Geheb,2008 The degradation of land and water resources as a result of agricultural activity has had an enormous impact on human societies and economies It is predicted that by 2025 most developing countries will face physical or economic water scarcity compounded by land degradation In order to alleviate this problem an advanced understanding of the state of our water resources and the relationships between land use water management and social systems is needed Conserving Land Protecting Water includes an overview of global patterns of land and water degradation and discusses new insights drawn from successful case studies on reversing soil and water degradation and their impact on food and environmental security

Gender, Generation and Poverty Sylvia H. Chant,2007-01-01 The feminisation of poverty is viewed as a global trend and of particular concern in developing regions Yet although popularisation of the term may have raised women s visibility in development discourses and gone some way to en gender policies for poverty reduction the construct is only weakly substantiated This work covers this topic

Trade, Growth and Inequality in the Era of Globalization Kishor Sharma,Oliver Morrissey,2006-04-18 In recent years globalization has been the subject of considerable research and comment A major phenomenon it is open to a variety of interpretations In particular the debate over trade liberalization growth and inequality has come under close scrutiny as demonstrations against globalization have gathered pace This volume provides a much needed comparative study of the link between globalization growth and inequality It assesses how globalization affects growth inequality and poverty in developing and transition countries Paying particular attention to eleven low and middle income countries the authors argue that globalization can actually help reduce poverty and inequity when institutions and physical infrastructures are efficient Divided into four parts the book documents the lessons drawn from case studies on Africa Latin America and Central Asia A fascinating book which sheds light on many globalization issues Trade Growth and Inequality in the Era of Globalization will be of interest to students and researchers of development economics globalization and international trade Moving Out of Poverty Jonna P. Estudillo, Keijiro Otsuka, 2015-08-20 The words of US President John F Kennedy the rising tide lifts all boats can be applied to inclusive growth in contemporary Asia where the poor are able to participate in and benefit from economic growth Moving Out of Poverty explores three channels through which economic growth confers gains to the poor and improves the status of women The first is creation of productive employment as labor is typically the most abundant asset of the poor and economic growth has created jobs in labor intensive sectors The second is investment in schooling which coupled with increased opportunities to earn income has elevated womens status in society The third is increased availability of improved infrastructure which directly impacts increasing household income from wage work and self employment activities This book will be of great value to development economists students and researchers interested in rural economies in Asia and policymakers engaged in poverty reduction Applying Anthropology in the Global Village Christina Wasson, Mary Odell Butler, Jacqueline Copeland-Carson, 2016-06-16 The realities of the globalized world have revolutionized traditional concepts of culture community and identity so how do applied social scientists use complicated fluid new ideas such as translocality and ethnoscape to solve pressing human problems In this book leading scholar practitioners survey the development of different subfields over at least two decades then offer concrete case studies to show how they have incorporated and refined new concepts and methods After an introduction synthesizing anthropological practice key theoretical concepts and ethnographic methods chapters examine the arenas of public health community development finance technology transportation gender environment immigration aging and child welfare An innovative guide to joining dynamic theoretical concepts with on the ground problem solving this book will be of interest to practitioners from a wide range of disciplines who work on social change as well as an excellent addition to graduate and undergraduate courses
