Houses From The Factory System Building And The Welfare State:

Architecture and the Welfare State Mark Swenarton, Tom Avermaete, Dirk van den Heuvel, 2014-09-15 In the decades following World War Two and in part in response to the Cold War governments across Western Europe set out ambitious programmes for social welfare and the redistribution of wealth that aimed to improve the everyday lives of their citizens. Many of these welfare state programmes housing schools new towns cultural and leisure centres involved not just construction but a new approach to architectural design in which the welfare objectives of these state funded programmes were delineated and debated. The impact on architects and architectural design was profound and far reaching with welfare state projects moving centre stage in architectural discourse not just in Europe but worldwide. This is the first book to explore the architecture of the welfare state in Western Europe from an international perspective. With chapters covering Austria Belgium France Germany Italy The Netherlands Sweden and the UK the book explores the complex role played by architecture in the formation and development of the welfare state in both theory and practice. Themes include the role of the built environment in the welfare state as a political project the colonial dimension of European welfare state architecture and its export to Africa and Asia the role of welfare state projects in promoting consumer culture and economic growth the picture of the collective produced by welfare state architecture the role of architectural innovation in the welfare state the role of the architect as opposed to construction companies and others in determining what was built the relationship between architectural and social theory the role of internal institutional critique and the counterculture. Contributors include Tom Avermaete Eve Blau Nicholas Bullock Miles Glendinning Janina Gosseye Hilde Heynen Caroline Maniaque Benton Helena Mattsson Luca Molinari Simon Pepper Michelle Provoost Lukasz Stanek Mark Swenarton Florian Urban and Dirk van den Heuvel.

An Architecture of Parts: Architects, Building Workers and Industrialisation in Britain 1940 - 1970

Christine Wall, 2013-07-04 This book is unique in describing the history of post war reconstruction from an entirely new perspective by focusing on the changing relationship between architects and building workers. It considers individual as well as collective interactions with technical change and in doing so brings together for the first time an extraordinary range of sources including technical archives oral history and visual material to describe the construction process both during and in the decades after the war. It focuses on the social aspects of production and the changes in working life for architects and building workers with increasing industrialization in particular analysing the effect on the building process of introducing dimensionally co-ordinated components. Both architects and building workers have been accused of creating a built environment now popularly discredited architects responsible for poor design and building workers for poor workmanship. However many of the structures and ideas underpinning this period of rapid change were revolutionary in their commitment to a complete transformation of the building process. An Architecture of Parts adds to the growing literature on changes in the building world during and immediately after the Second World War. It is significant both empirically and historically in its examination of the ideas technology and relationships that fired industrialization of the building process in mid century Britain The politics of housing Peter Shapely,2017-10-03 Exploring the politics of housing during 1890 1990 this fascinating study examines the interaction not only of national and local politics but also of local factors such as civic culture key local players local discourse and geographical and demographic problems This book argues that increasingly tenants acted as consumers of a public service and it questions the way in which notions of consumerism shaped responses to the housing debate An analysis of the impact of legislation on housing policy in different cities is provided as well as a more detailed account of the politics of housing in Manchester including the Victorian legacy the emergence of local government intervention post war overspill estates new system built flats and their rapid deterioration rising tenant anger and protests and the beginning of a new approach based on consultation and partnerships The book will be of value to anyone studying urban history politics governance civic culture social policy and society Thatcher's Progress Guy Ortolano,2019-06-27 Horizons Planning Architecture Community Consulting Housing Paris Under Construction Jacob Paskins,2015-12-07 During the 1960s building sites in Paris became spaces that expressed preoccupations about urban transformation labour immigration and national identity As new buildings and infrastructure changed the city building sites revealed the substandard living and working conditions of migrant construction workers in France Moreover construction was the touchstone in debates about the dangers of urban life and triggered action in communities whose districts faced demolition Paris Under Construction explores the social political and cultural responses to construction work and urban transformation in the Paris metropolitan region during the 1960s This examination of a decade of intensive building work considers the ways in which the experience of construction was mediated produced and reproduced through a range of complex and sometimes contradictory representations The building sites that produced the new Paris are no longer visible and were perhaps never intended to be seen yet different groups closely observed and recorded construction giving it meanings that went beyond specific building activities The research draws extensively on French newspaper television and radio archives and delves into rarely examined trade union material Paris Under Construction gives voice to the witnesses of and participants in urban transformation who are usually excluded from architectural and urban history John Bull's Other Homes Murray Fraser,1996-01-01 State housing became an integral part of the relationship between Ireland and Great Britain from the 1880s until the early 1990s Using research from both Irish and Westminster sources this book shows that there was recurrent pressure for the state to intervene in housing in Ireland in a period when the Irish Question was the major domestic political issue The result was that the model of subsidized state housing subsequently introduced in Britain was first developed in Ireland as a product of the tensions of British rule An important corollary of innovative Irish housing policy was its influence even in a negative sense on developments in mainland Britain This book also examines the cultural impact of imperialism and in particular the way in which British ideas of garden suburb housing and town planning design came significantly to reshape the Irish urban environment Fraser not only presents hitherto unknown material but does so in a unique interdisciplinary blend of architectural planning urban and socio economic history Urban Politics and Space in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries Barry M. Doyle, 2009-10-02 This book addresses the increasing regionalisation of urban governance and politics in an era of industrialisation suburbanisation and welfare extension It provides an important reassessment of the role structure and activities of urban elites highlighting their vitality and their interdependence and demonstrating the increasing regionalisation of municipal politics as towns sought to promote themselves extend services and even expand physically onto a regional level Moreover it explores the discourses surrounding space in which gender class morality and community all feature prominently How urban space and its uses were defined and redefined became key political weapons across the regions of England in the nineteenth century and these chapters show how a range of sources maps poems songs paintings illustrated journalism social investigations historical texts were employed by contemporaries to shape the urban and its image often by placing it in a regional context or contributing to the creation of a regional image and identity This collection illustrates the continuing vitality of the study of urban politics and governance and presents a rare attempt to place English urban history in a regional context Barry Doyle has assembled an impressive team of experts on urban politics to examine not just party politics but the wider machinery of government the boards agencies and committees that shaped British towns and cities after 1830 Space and place were contested and negotiated and a distinctive sense of local identity emerged In so doing the collection challenges some of the generalisations about the governance of urban Britain and reminds us that despite a shrinking globe the local and regional are crucial to our everyday lives The book should be read by all interested in and especially those working for local government Professor Richard Rodger University of Edinburgh In Urban Politics and Urban Space in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries Regional Perspectives Barry Doyle brings together nine original essays by both established and younger authors to explore three inter related themes in urban history politics space and region from the early to mid nineteenth century to the mid twentieth century The book is conveniently divided into three sections dealing with structures of politics politics institutions and urban management and governance discourses and space Each of the contributions to this volume promises to both enrich our knowledge of specific moments in British politico urban development through the study of discrete developments in time and space and to open up and extend the debate on the British variant of urban modernity Each examines the ways in which local power space and regional relations developed and changed between the early nineteenth and mid twentieth century Localities their politics and communal identities are never really far from a national context indeed they largely shaped it as these essays make clear Doyle is to be commended for his endeavour not just as the editor but in particular for his introduction to the volume In a richly referenced essay that comes in at just over seven and half thousand words he casts a panoramic view over the field in the last few decades making connections where few contemporary urban historians care to tread Doyle gives us a forceful challenge to what he sees as a particularly English malaise in this period namely that of failing to recognise the potential of regional and local government to shape and manage the major reallocation of space and power a vital sphere of public life that is contemporary to our own times It is a masterly and well informed piece of writing that will set the standard for some years to come Professor Anthony McElligott University of Limerick Northern Clerkenwell and Pentonville Philip Temple,2008 Clerkenwell is one of the most varied intricate and richly historic districts of London indeed its present prosperity is rooted in its past Northern Clerkenwell has often been acknowledged as having some of the capital's best Georgian housing and urban landscapes The British Building Industry since 1800 Christopher Powell,2013-12-16 This scholarly and well researched study of the building industry documents the interplay of new materials and technologies costs and the changing social and economic forces that affected the decision making about our built environment over the last two centuries The author provides a succinct and readable survey of the growth and development of British building which will be of interest to all building specialists and those training for a career in the construction industry The Practice of Modernism John R. Gold,2007-06-13 Making extensive use of information gained from hours of in depth interviews with architects this new book examines the complex relationship between vision and subsequent practice in the saga of post war urban reconstruction Walls Have Feelings Katherine Shonfield,2003-09-02 For the first time this book brings the insights methodologies and visions of film to the practice of architecture Walls Have Feelings poses unanswered questions from our immediate past crucial for the future of the city what was the cultural mindset leading to the triumph of Brutalism What is the urban and domestic impact of large scale office building Are there alternatives to the planners city of object and Why does your flat leak This book uniquely brings to bear questions of urgent cultural relevance on critical design decisions As such it is of as much importance to architects planners and students of design as to students of cultural history geography and all enthusiasts of cities and of film The Eclipse of 'Elegant Economy' Martin Cohen,2016-03-23 Elizabeth Gaskell might have been amused to learn that the Victorian elegant economy she mocked so poignantly in Cranford reached a new apogee in the mid twentieth century and endured the invasion of its precise antithesis conspicuous consumption For Britons of all classes the years of austerity during and after the Second World War were years of disorientation and fears of resurgence of the worst of the interwar decades They had never had more money in their pockets or less material things on which to spend it Many took refuge in the elegant economy its creator dubbed a sort of sour grapeism which made us very peaceful and satisfied Constrained by rationing manufacturing and import controls personal finance could only be disbursed on non material things sometimes wisely sometimes pragmatically and sometimes by throwing all caution to the wind Here for the first time is the history of these diverse reactions explored through Britain's metamorphosis from austerity to affluence with consumerism seen through fresh eyes Today political commentators constantly warn of the encroachment of austerity This book is a timely reminder of the years of real austerity in Britain when regardless of financial status everyone suffered its tribulations when a sub prime mortgage was unimaginable when abuse of expense claims by public figures was unthinkable and when no one dared utter a word critical of their bank or its manager
