Joint Forest Management Hemant Kumar Gupta,2006 Joint Forest Management JFM is now a principal forest management strategy in India The government views JFM as a pivotal strategy for addressing the national policy goal of achieving 33% forest cover by 2012 JFM represents one model of community based forestry in which the State engages with communities with forestry Though the current JFM model is weighted in favour of state forest department control over planning management investment harvesting and marketing This book is an attempt to understand the evolution and introduction of the JFM principles and concepts of JFM The combine influence of historical social economic cultural and ecological factors along with policy impacts in people s participation in managing forest is illustrated by taking case of North West Himalayas Over the past several decades the focus in forestry has shifted towards forest protection and conservation and JFM represents a key policy thrusts in India JFM is continued to be evolved as the experiences from different states across India are informing the process of JFM implementation so that policy and guidelines to improve the program are revised by the central and state governments regularly The process approach is being followed so that forests are managed sustainably with people s involvement in forestry programmes to improve the livelihoods of forest dependent people s and reduced poverty The studies have demonstrated that the potential economic benefits from improved forest productivity and policy reforms in favour of JFM are huge both for people and government Joint Forest Management for Bio-diversity Enhancement S. Balaji,2004 In the Indian context Participatory Appraisal of Natural Resources Neela Mukherjee,1997

RURAL DEVELOPMENT : COMMUNITY FOREST MANAGEMENT AND SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT Dr. Nukavarapu Nageswara Rao,2024-03-29 The forest is a significant natural resource that nature has provided to humankind The protection and development of forest resources affects the global environment as well as a nation s population and economy Development of forests involves the extension of the resource base whereas conservation of forests implies the preservation and control of the resource In the light of their long standing cohabitation the preservation and development of forest resources are closely linked to the means of subsistence of local inhabitants It is obvious that any endeavour to conserve and develop forest resources cannot be seen in isolation without taking the local inhabitants concerns about their means of subsistence into account World Forests, Society and Environment Matti Palo,J. Uusivuori,2012-12-06 This book addresses current global and regional issues concerning the world s forests societies and the environment from an independent and non governmental point of view A main message is that cooperation on a global scale is not only commendable but essential if solutions to the problems facing the world's forests are to be found. To achieve this, modern science needs to find a clearer picture of relationships between forests, human activity and the environment and of the consequences of environmental change for the ability of societies to survive. Part I, Editorial Perspectives, is analyzing the ongoing globalization processes of forests, societies and the environment. Part II, Society and Environment, reviews worldwide trends with significance for the future of forests and forestry. While the trends are influenced by forest sector issues, that sector is influenced to a much larger extent by external factors such as demography, urbanization or technological development. Part III, Importance of Forests, looks at the value of the goods and services of forests, tangible and intangible, market and non-market, and concludes that failure to recognize their full value is one of the crucial impediments to sustainable development. In Part IV, Global Forum, scientists take up global forestry themes: deforestation, trade and the environment, climate change, biodiversity, with the aim of stimulating wider discussion. Part V, Regional Forum, looks at major themes of particular relevance to Africa, Asia, Pacific, Latin America, North America and Europe, such as farm and agroforestry, corruption and concessions, urban forestry and environmental conflicts. Part VI introduces the special theme, forest sectors in transition economies. Teams of scientists from Russia and China focus on the implications of the transition from plan to market economy, illuminating both the very different nature of the forest sector in the two countries and the different transition paths that they have adopted. In the past millennium, the entire world has been discovered. In the past half century, the contribution of forests to the economy worldwide has been perceived, while only recently have their societal and environmental benefits been globally recognized. Globalization is a demanding process requiring knowledge and information. This book offers knowledge, facts and information but also values from diverse human and cultural perspectives about world forests, society and environment to help us towards equity in our use of the global forest, to create a clearer vision on a unasylva.

Global Exposition of Wildlife Management Gbolagade Akeem Lameed, 2017-03-22. The book Global Exposition of Wildlife Management covers five research topics connected to wildlife management: From conservation and domestication of species from the wild, the socioeconomic importance of wildlife to Tuberculosis within wildlife species as an emerging health threat for both wildlife and humans. Topics presented also discuss bush meat utilization and its impact on biodiversity, conservation, community forestry management and its role in biodiversity conservation, food and feeding ecology, urban forestry and integrated island management for ecologically sensitive areas. This book also presents wildlife conservation research using a public aquarium as a case study. Each chapter gives special reference to the prevailing problems in wildlife conservation and hopes to provide possible solutions.

Managing Forests as Common Property J. E. M. Arnold, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 1998-01-01. The purpose of this study is to bring together available information about the role of common property as a system of governance and its present relevance to forest management and use, to review the historical record of common property systems that have disappeared or survived, to examine the experience of selected contemporary collective management programmes in different countries and to identify the main factors that appear to determine success or failure at the present time Climate Change and India P. R. Shukla, 2003 Provides Assessments Of The Impacts Vulnerabilities And Adaptation Needs For The Key Economic And Ecological Sectors Of India The Sectors Assessed Include Water Agriculture Forestry Eco System Health Coastal Zones Energy And Infrastructure Of Interest To Policy Makers And Researchers An Excellent Addition To Literature On Global Environmental Assessment Methodology Policies And Perspectives Environment Jules Pretty, 2006-06-23 This four volume set explores the locations where the environment matters most such as where people are poor where environments are under threat such as on frontiers where there are few natural resources remaining and where industrialization is rampant It will also explore these concerns at different system levels from local community to regional national and global It will also explore costs of damage to the very resources on which economies rely and the values of environmental goods and services and the controversies surrounding such valuations It is organized around environment people interactions livelihoods poverty income economic growth environment environment interactions do people matter and people people interactions collective action challenges institutions Participatory Forest Management: India , 1999 Papers presented at the Regional Workshop on Participatory Forest Management Implications for Policy and Human Resources Development in the Hindu Kush Himalayas held during 7-12 May 1998 at Kunming China
