Jocelyn Robert:

Jocelyn Robert Jocelyn Robert, Christof Migone, 2002      The Pursuit of the Heiress A. P. W. Malcomson, 2006 The Pursuit of the Heiress is a new greatly enlarged and more widely focused version of what the late Lawrence Stone described as a brilliant long essay or short book on the subject of the role of heiresses among the Irish aristocracy which was published by the Ulster Historical Foundation under the same title in 1982 and has long been out of print The new book comes to the same broad conclusions about heiresses namely that their importance as a means of enlarging the estates or retrieving the fortunes of their husbands has been much exaggerated This was because known heiresses were well protected by a variety of legal devices and in common with many aristocratic women of the day also had minds and strong preferences of their own which meant that they were not generally an object of deliberate or profitable pursuit The new book also ranges more widely than its central theme of heiresses and addresses other aspects of aristocratic marriage such as abductions elopements mesalliances the supposed rise of the affective family and the disadvantaged situation of even the richest and most privileged women in an age when both adultery and divorce were largely the prerogative of men      Planches Hors-texte Jocelyn Robert, VU, centre de diffusion et de production de la photographie, 2009      Historical Anecdotes of the Families of the Boleynes, Careys, Mordaunts, Hamiltons and Jocelyns Emilia Georgiana Susanna REILLY, 1839      The peerage of the British empire as at present existing. Parliament. House of Commons, 1961      Records of Eighteenth-century Domestic Architecture and Decoration in Dublin Georgian Society (Dublin, Ireland), 1910      The Athenaeum, 1889      Media Archaeology Erkki Huhtamo, Jussi Parikka, 2011-06-12 Huhtamo and Parikka from the first and second generations of media archaeology have brought together the best writings from almost all of the best authors in the field Whether we speak of cultural materialism media art history new historicism or software studies the essays compiled here provide not only an anthology of innovative historical case studies but also a methodology for the future of media studies as material and historical analysis Media Archaeology is destined to be a key handbook for a new generation of media scholars Sean Cubitt author of The Cinema Effect Taken together this excellent collection of essays by a wide range of scholars and practitioners demonstrates how the emerging field of media archaeology not only excavates the ways in which newer media work to remediate earlier forms and practices but also sketches out how older media help to premeditate new ones Richard Grusin author of Premediation Affect and Mediality after 9 11 In Media Archaeology a constellation of interdisciplinary writers explore society's relationship with the technological imaginary through history with fascinating essays on influencing machines Freud as media theorist interactive games from the 19th century to the present day just to name a few As an artist my mind is set on fire by discussions of the marvelous inventions that never made it to the mainstream such as optophonic poetry Christopher Strachey's 1952 Love letter generator for the Manchester Mark II computer and the Baby talkie Zoe Beloff artist and editor of The Coney Island Amateur Psychoanalytic Society and Its Circle A long awaited synthesis addressing media archaeology in all of its epistemological complexity With wide ranging intellectual breath and creative insight Huhtamo and Parikka bring together an eminent array of international scholars in film and media studies literary criticism and history of science in the spirit of making the discourse of the humanities legible to artist intellectuals This foundational volume enables a sophisticated understanding of reproducible audiovisual media culture as apparatus historical form and avant garde space of play Peter J Bloom author of French Colonial Documentary Mythologies of Humanitarianism An essential read for everyone interested in the histories of media and art Oliver Grau author of MediaArtHistories Media archaeology is a wonderful new shadow field If you are willing to step outside the glow of new media this book's approaches can shift how you experience the objects and experiences that fill the new everyday of contemporary life No one captures the beauty of studying new media in the shadow of older media implements and practices better than Erkki Huhtamo the Finnish writer curator and scholar of media technology and design famous for his creative work as a preservationist and an interpreter of pre cinematic technologies of visual display He has teamed up here with Jussi Parikka the Finnish scholar who has brought us an insect theory of media to give us this long awaited collection of essays in media archaeology The surprise of the book is that the essays collectively bring forward a range of approaches to considering archaeological practice giving us new ways to think about our embodied and subjective orientations to technologies and objects through the lens of the material remnants of practice rather than offering a narrow definition of the field The collection moves between computational machines and influencing machines preservation and imagination offering a range of ways to live the new everyday of media experience through the imaginary of archaeology Lisa Cartwright co author of Practices of Looking An Introduction to Visual Culture Where McLuhan's Understanding Media ends Media Archaeology actually begins Refusing the often futile search for the eternal laws of media Media Archaeology does something more difficult and rare It literally brings the history of media alive by drawing into presence the enigmatic heterogeneous unruly past of the media its artifacts machines imaginaries tactics and games What results is a fabulous cabinet of media memories the imaginary moving with kinetic frenzy histories of what happens when media collide in the electronic space of the virtual and stories about those strange interstitial spaces between analogue and digital Arthur Kroker author of The Will to Technology and the Culture of Nihilism Rupturing the continuities and established values of traditional media history this exciting and thought provoking collection makes a significant contribution to our understanding of media culture and demonstrates that the presence of the past in present day media is central to the recognition and re cognition that media archaeology promotes John Fullerton editor of Screen Culture History and Textuality Here at last is a collection of essays that are a critical step to comprehending the history of our impulse to see ourselves in the machines we have made This could be the beginning of Archaeology of Intention Bernie Lubell artist Huhtamo and Parikka s expertly curated collection is a kaleidoscopic tour of media archaeology giving us forceful evidence of that unruly domain s vitality while preserving its wonderful unpredictability With this essential volume countless new paths have been opened up for media and cultural historians Charles R Acland author of Screen Traffic This brilliant collection of essays provides much needed material and historical grounding for our understanding of new media At the same time it animates that ground by recognizing the integral roles that imagination embodiment and even productive disturbance play in media historiography Yet these essays constitute more than a collection of historical case studies together they transform the book s subject into its overall method Media Archaeology performs media archaeology Huhtamo and Parikka excavate the intellectual traditions and map the epistemological terrain of media archaeology itself demonstrating that the field is ripe with possibilities not only for further historical examination but also for imagining exciting new scholarly and creative futures Shannon Mattern The New School      The dictionary of biographical reference.
