Manley,2020-08-17 Why do kids kill Author Michael J Manley researched the factors that play a role in this deadly phenomenon His short story is based on research citing acclaimed forensic psychologist and researcher Marcus Martin who explored the subject for top universities and on material from psychological journals and news articles Is it caused by current events and social media the easy availability of guns or perhaps violent video games Or are the killings simply hidden DNA factors The age old mystery of why kids kill dates back to ancient times The Romans trained their youth to go into battle at a young age and to fight for their lives In today's world of video games the author proposes that the same urge to kill is happening once again Young minds assimilate to the killing in the gaming industry's video games just as they did when they were trained as gladiators. What happened to the kids who didn't make it as gladiators and were sent home to their villages? Did they kill their neighbors and parents just as today's young people mindlessly shoot others? Is history repeating itself?
