

The background of the title card is a detailed landscape painting. It depicts a rugged coastline with a prominent stone tower or castle ruin on a rocky shore. The sea is calm, reflecting the sky and the structures. In the foreground, a small wooden boat is beached on the rocks. The sky is filled with heavy, dramatic clouds, suggesting an approaching storm or a somber mood. The overall style is reminiscent of 19th-century landscape art.

John Splendid:

John Splendid The Tale of a Poor Gentleman and the Little Wars of Lorn Neil Munro, 2018-10-17 Excerpt To read this tale dear Hugh without any association of its incidents with the old respectable chronicles of the Historians is what I should wish you could always do That is the happy manner with Romance that is the enviable aptness of the child But when by the favour of God you grow older and more reflective seeking perhaps for more in these pages than they meant to give you may wonder that the streets the lanes the tenements herein set forth so much resemble those we know to day though less than two hundred years ago the bracken waved upon their promontory You may wonder too that the Silver Mines of Coillebhraid discovered in the time of your greatgrandfather should have so strangely been anticipated in the age of Gillesbeg Gruamach Let not those chronological divergences perturb you they were in the manuscript which you will be good enough to assume of Elrigmore and I would not alter them Nor do I diminish by a single hour Elrigmore s estimate that two days were taken on the Miraculous Journey to Inverlochry though numerous histories have made it less In that as in a few other details Elrigmore s account is borne out by one you know to whom The Little Wars of Lorn and Lochaber are yet as it were an impulse of yesterday and the name of Athole is utterly detestable
