Sixties British Cinema Robert Murphy, 2019-07-25 British films of the 1960s are undervalued Their search for realism has often been dismissed as drabness and their more frivolous efforts can now appear just empty headed Robert Murphy s Sixties British Cinema is the first study to challenge this view He shows that the realist tradition of the late 50s and early 60s was anything but dreary and depressing and gave birth to a clutch of films remarkable for their confidence and vitality Saturday Night and Sunday Morning A Kind of Loving and A Taste of Honey are only the better known titles Sixties British Cinema revalues key genres of the period horror crime and comedy and takes a fresh look at the swinging London films finding disturbing undertones that reflect the cultural changes of the decade Now that our cinematic past is constantly recycled on television Murphy s informative engaging and perceptive review of these

British films of the 1970s Paul Newland,2015-11-01 British films of the 1970s offers highly detailed and insightful critical analysis of a range of individual films of the period This analysis draws upon an innovative range of critical methodologies which place the film texts within a rich variety of historical contexts The book sets out to examine British films of the 1970s in order to get a clearer understanding of two things the fragmentary state of the filmmaking culture of the period and the fragmentary nature of the nation that these films represent It argues that there is no singular narrative to be drawn about British filmmaking in the 1970s other than the fact that these films offer evidence of a Britain and ideas of Britishness characterised by vicissitudes While this was a period of struggle and instability it was also a period of openings of experiment and of new ideas Newland looks at many films including Carry On Girls O Lucky Man That'll be the Day The Shout and The Long Good Friday

Romanticism and Film Will Kitchen,2020-11-26 The relationship between Romanticism and film remains one of the most neglected topics in film theory and history with analysis often focusing on the proto cinematic significance of Richard Wagner's music dramas One new and interesting way of examining this relationship is by looking beyond Wagner and developing a concept of audio visual explanation rooted in Romantic philosophical aesthetics and employing it in the analysis of film discourse and representation Using this concept of audio visual explanation the cultural image of the Hungarian pianist and composer Franz Liszt a contemporary of Wagner and another significant practitioner of Romantic audio visual aesthetics is examined in reference to specific case studies including the rarely explored films Song Without End 1960 and Lisztomania 1975 This multifaceted study of film discourse and representation employs Liszt as a guiding thread structuring a general exploration of the concept of Romanticism and its relationship with film more generally This exploration is supported by new theories of representation based on schematic cognition the philosophy of explanation and the recently developed film theory of Jacques Rancière Individual chapters address the historical background of audio visual explanation in Romantic philosophical aesthetics Liszt's role in the historical discourses of film and film music and various filmic representations of Liszt and his compositions Throughout these investigations Will Kitchen explores the various ways that films explain or make sense of things through a Romantic aesthetic combination of sound and vision
