

Foundation of Linear Programming: A Managerial Perspective from Solving System of Inequalities to Software Implementation

Hossein Arsham, University of Baltimore, USA

ABSTRACT

The aim and scope of this paper are the infusion of purposeful action by decision makers with an explicit understanding of analytical linear programming (LP) tools in order that the managers will implement strategic results correctly. The advances in computing software have brought LP tools to the desktop for a variety of applications to support managerial decision-making. However, it is already recognized that current LP tools do not answer the managerial questions satisfactorily. For instance, there is a costly difference between the mathematical and managerial interpretations of sensitivity analysis. The LP software packages provide sensitivity results about the optimality of a basis and not about the optimality of the values of the decision variables, and the shadow prices that are of interest to the manager. Society has developed the largest sensitivity region based on "optimal solution," not that which "preserves the basis" that allows for simultaneous dependent/independent changes. The aim and results of this article are found further in the work.

1. INTRODUCTION

Linear programming has been a fundamental topic in the development of managerial decision-making. The subject has its origins in the early work of Fourier (1820s) on attempting to solve systems of linear inequalities. However, it has to wait for the invention of the Standard Simplex Method.

There are also many diverse applications, and therefore many specialized solution algorithms have been developed. Hatami-Marbini and Tavana (2011) introduced a new method called the bounded dual simplex method for bounded fuzzy number linear programming problems which is useful for these situations. This algorithm constructs a dual feasible basic solution after obtaining a working basic and then moves towards attaining primal feasibility while maintaining dual feasibility throughout.

Development of Builders, Leaders and Managers for 21st-Century Business: Curriculum Review at Columbia

Business School N. Capon, 2012-12-06 Business and management education has an important impact on business practice throughout the world To a very large extent possession of the MBA degree is a passport into the upper reaches of management and CEOs of many major corporations have earned an MBA It is a reasonable inference that the education received by these leaders and managers during their MBA experience has an important impact on the way that businesses throughout the world are led and managed and that major corporate decisions are made The heart of the MBA education is the curriculum and curriculum design is perhaps the most important strategic function for a business school faculty to undertake In order to understand the many issues concerning this contemporary curriculum review this book examines three related contextual domains First it details the long term growth of business and management education Second it examines the major theoretical and empirical literatures on organizational evolution and decision making paying special attention to decision making in institutions of higher education Finally the book describes the previous major curriculum review at Columbia Business School in the late 1950s and the subsequent changes that formed the curriculum that was changed in 1992 This book demonstrates what can be achieved by an institution that sets high standards for its business education and assists faculty and administrators in other schools of business and management as they contemplate revision of their curricula In addition it provides a prime example of curriculum design effort in one of the leading institutions worldwide Finally it will be of interest to scholars in several different fields notably higher education curriculum review organizational decision making and long run organizational evolution
