where possible statistical data the authors analyze the performance of job placement programs in three states with a representative range of religious political and demographic traits Massachusetts Indiana and North Carolina Throughout they focus on measurable outcomes as they compare non faith based with faith based organizations nonprofits with for profits and the logistics of contracting before and after Charitable Choice Among their findings in states where such information is available the composition of social service contractor pools has changed very little Reflecting their varied political cultures states have funded programs differently Faith based organizations have not been eager to seek government contracts perhaps wary of additional legal restraints and reporting burdens The authors conclude that faith based organizations appear no more effective than secular organizations at government funded social service provision that there has been no dramatic change in the social welfare landscape since Charitable Choice and that the constitutional concerns of its detractors may be valid This empirical study penetrates the fog of the culture wars moving past controversy over the role of religion in public life to offer pragmatic suggestions for policymakers and organizations who must decide how best to assist the needy
