

need to balance between expanded coverage and the price differential between municipal and private water service, particularly for those that have no alternatives.

Capacity building to ensure the continued quality of water resources, environmental sustainability and climate resilience of all investments will be supported, especially where competition for scarce water resources is increasing. By focusing on capacity building and leveraging local partners, programs can maximize investment on donors and better lasting sustainability.²⁰ Collaborative relationships with other multi-lateral and bi-lateral donors, with local and international banks, and with financing institutions to increase attention to small and medium-scale financing should be strengthened.

III 1.2: Increase first time and improved sustainable access to improved sanitation services²¹

USAID will highlight scaling up and strengthening its sanitation programs as a special area of focus in the Strategy. This includes bringing a number of proven innovative and successful approaches to scale through Community Approaches to Total

Sanitation (CATS). In addition, these efforts will focus on combining the promising approaches of Community-Led Total Sanitation (CLTS) and sanitation marketing to generate sanitation demand and strengthen the supply of sanitation products and services at scale, leading to improved health for people in rural and urban areas.²²

A number of innovative and successful approaches have increased access to sanitation on a small scale. However, governments and the global community have not been able to scale-up and sustain these efforts. Moving forward, Missions must increase the proportion of water investments focused on sanitation services as sanitation is critical to health and access lags far behind that of water. Sanitation is too often left out of programs, almost universally falling behind in terms of priorities in water programming. This Strategy encourages Missions to focus on sanitation services in both urban and rural settings. In countries that are off track to meet the MDG for sanitation, and where diarrheal disease and undernutrition are prevalent, Missions must add sanitation as a key element of their water, health, and nutrition activities.

Initiatives should promote the three pillars of WASH programming: support for sanitation infrastructure, the promotion of behavior change, and creation of an enabling policy and institutional environment including robust financing and the development of local ordinances and regulations to stop open defecation and/or establish latrine building codes. These approaches generate sanitation demand and strengthen the supply of sanitation products and services. With limited sanitation funding, these approaches can be integrated to add value to nutrition, HIV/AIDS, governance, education, and maternal and child health programming.

USAID Missions can promote community or public toilets in dense settlements, as well as sanitation facilities in institutional settings, such as schools, health facilities, markets, and transportation hubs. It is important that these efforts involve youth associations and women's groups and encourages the construction of facilities that are accessible for people with disabilities and the elderly. To accelerate expansion of decentralized sanitation solutions in rural and peri-urban areas not connected to a sewerage network, Missions should focus on the entire sanitation hierarchy in developing sustainable sanitation services. Integrating supply-demand marketing approach can help address sustainability concerns of past sanitation efforts, especially those that focused on highly subsidized rural and peri-urban latrine construction. USAID sanitation programs will need to address how and where to dispose of concentrated sewage and sludge to not add to the environmental

USAID/Egypt Water and Sanitation Services at Scale

Since the 1970s, USAID has supported the development of a sustainable water sector in Egypt. Beginning with emergent major infrastructure projects to address critical health issues in large urban centers and coastal cities, USAID sustained investment in the sector through smaller but critical infrastructure projects in provincial and secondary cities and small-scale simple projects in the poorest governorates in Upper Egypt. USAID supported institutional strengthening activities and focused on helping local utilities develop their management capabilities and operations and maintenance capacity. USAID supported Egypt's water sector policy and regulatory reform, establishing the holding company for Water and Wastewater and establishing 24 regional utilities. As a result of this nearly $4 billion program, more than one quarter of Egypt's population has gained access to new and improved water supply or sanitation service and basic human health has improved dramatically.

Institutional And Technical Options In The Development And Management Of Smallscale Water Report 7:

Institutional and Technical Options in the Development and Management of Small-scale Irrigation Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,1998-01-01 Hydro-political assessment of water governance from the top-down and review of literature on local level institutions and practices in the Volta Basin Yaw Opoku-Ankomah,Youssouf Dembélé,Ben Y. Ampomah,Léopold Somé,2006-07-07 An hydro political assessment of water governance in the Volta Basin is one of two preparatory activities intended to guide and inform the development of a generic methodological model for building local indigenous institutional principles into international transboundary river basin institutional arrangements This report details from a top down perspective the historical developments of water governance of the Volta River Basin paying special attention to the economic political and social dynamics of water management within the legal and institutional frameworks in the Ghana and Burkina Faso portions of the Volta basin The findings are based primarily on literature review interviews with some key professionals and to some extent previous knowledge and field experience Water accounting & auditing guidelines Batchelor, C,Hoogeveen, J,Faurès, J.M.,Peiser, L.,Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2016-01-01 In many regions of the world sustainable and reliable delivery of water services has become increasingly complex and problematic Complexities that are very likely to increase considering the unprecedented confluence of pressures linked to demographic economic dietary trends and climate change Particularly if overall demand for freshwater exceeds supply the delivery of water services is often less about engineering although engineering is still required and more about politics governance managing and protecting sources resolving conflicts about water ensuring rights to water are respected and so on It is also about understanding and monitoring the hydrological cycle at the appropriate scale of analysis This is where water accounting and auditing can play a crucial role The rationale behind this water accounting and auditing sourcebook is that scope exists worldwide to improve water related sectoral and inter sectoral decision making at local regional and national levels Water accounting and auditing are recommended by FAO and others as being fundamental to initiatives that aim to cope with water scarcity This sourcebook aims to provide practical advice on the application and use of water accounting and auditing helping users planning and implementing processes that best fit their needs Sustainable Irrigation Development in the White Volta sub-Basin Eric Antwi Ofosu,2011-12-16 Sub Saharan Africa has an irrigation potential of about 42 million hectares of which only 17% is developed Despite several investments in irrigation the growth is slow This study aims at helping to achieve sustainable irrigation in sub Saharan Africa through gaining a better understanding of productive irrigation water use and effective management Deficit Irrigation Practices Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2002-01-01 The great challenge for the future will be the task of increasing food production with less water particularly in countries with limited water and land resources In the context of improving water productivity there is a growing interest in deficit irrigation an irrigation practice whereby water supply is reduced below maximum levels and mild stress is allowed with minimal effects on yield This publication presents a range of studies carried out for several crops and under different ecological conditions showing the various options and practices of deficit irrigation and the impacts of reduced irrigation water supply on crop yield The synthesis shows that deficit irrigation can result in substantial water savings with little impact on the quality and quantity of the harvested yield FAO Publications Titles in Print Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,1999 Drought characteristics and management in Central Asia and Turkey Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2018-06-28 The report assesses the occurrence and impacts of drought the current policies underlying drought management as well as the mitigation measures and responses adopted in Central Asia and Turkey with a focus on Agriculture Sector It is part of a series of similar studies carried out in different regions and countries of the world with the objective of shedding light on drought effects sensitizing policy makers for the much needed paradigm shift to pro active drought management planning and providing guidance for the development of such policies The studies are carried out by FAO in collaboration with the Water for Food Institute University of Nebraska Lincoln USA as a direct contribution to FAO s Strategic Objective Increasing the resilience of livelihoods to threats and crises Rethinking the Approach to Groundwater and Food Security Marcus Moench,Jacob J. Burke,Yarrow Moench,2003-01-01 This study attempts to re frame the current thinking on groundwater development and the implications for food security Groundwater is important in agriculture as it provides a reliable fallback when rainfeeding fails It is therefore instrumental in managing risk and optimizing food production However accessing groundwater has become habit and turned to dependency Resources limits on many key aquifers have been exceeded and competition for groundwater has become intense This study highlights the role of adaptive strategies in dealing with aquifer management and indicates directions of research and management Guidance on realizing real water savings with crop water productivity interventions Van Opstal, J., Droogers, P., Kaune, A., Steduto, P., Perry, C.,Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations ,Future Water,2021-03-18 This technical document contains clear and practical guidelines on how to implement real water savings in agriculture through interventions for enhancing crop water productivity A distinction is made between real water savings and apparent water savings Apparent water savings record reductions in water withdrawals but do not account for changes in water consumption Real water savings record reductions in water consumption and non recoverable return flows runoff or percolation This guidance document emphasizes the paradox of water savings at field and basin scales which usually do not translate into increased water availability for other users as is commonly believed Water Charging in Irrigated Agriculture Gez Cornish,Barry Bosworth,C. J. Perry,Jacob J. Burke,Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2004-01-01 This document presents an analysis of experience in irrigation water charging drawn from published literature and a series of six case studies These sources provide a broad spectrum of experience from less developed to more developed countries The aim has been to make an assessment of the claims concerning irrigation water charging as a tool for cost recovery achieving financial sustainability and demand management achieving resource sustainability

Drought characteristics and management in North Africa and the Near East Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2018-06-19 The report assesses the occurrence and impacts of drought the current policies underlying drought management as well as the mitigation measures and responses adopted in the Near East and North Africa region with a focus on the Agriculture Sector It is the third of a series of similar studies carried out in different regions and countries of the world with the objective of shedding light on drought effects sensitizing policy makers for the much needed paradigm shift to pro active drought management planning and providing guidance for the development of such policies The studies are carried out by FAO in collaboration with the Water for Food Institute University of Nebraska Lincoln USA as a direct contribution to FAO s Strategic Objective increasing the resilience of livelihoods to disasters and Strategic Objective make agriculture forestry and fisheries more productive and sustainable

Yield gap analysis of field crops Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2018-06-29 To feed a world population that will exceed 9 billion by 2050 requires an estimated 60% increase over current primary agricultural productivity Closing the common and often large gap between actual and attainable crop yield is critical to achieve this goal To close yield gaps in both small and large scale cropping systems worldwide we need 1 definitions and techniques to measure and model yield at different levels actual attainable potential and different scales in space field farm region global and time short and long term 2 identification of the causes of gaps between yield levels 3 management options to reduce the gaps where feasible and 4 policies to favour adoption of sustainable gap closing solutions The aim of this publication is to critically review the methods for yield gap analysis hence addressing primarily the first of these four requirements reporting a wide ranging and well referenced analysis of literature on current methods to assess productivity of crops and cropping systems

Irrigation in Africa in Figures Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2005-01-01 The AQUASTAT programme was established to develop a comprehensive picture of water resources and irrigation in developing countries and to give systematic up to date and reliable information on water for agriculture and development This report sets out an analysis of water availability and its use on the African continent and changes that have occurred over the last decade with an emphasis on agricultural water use and management The report includes a CD ROM with detailed profiles on the situation in each of the 53 countries in Africa

Catalóg Bhliantúil Ireland. Stationery Office,1998 Demand for Products of Irrigated Agriculture in Sub-Saharan Africa P. J. Riddell,Michael John Westlake,J. Burke,Jacob J.

Burke,2006-01-01 If irrigated production is to make a significant contribution to food security and economic growth in Sub Saharan Africa it will have to be re structured across the region as a whole This is the main conclusion of a study undertaken by FAO to analyse the drivers of demand for irrigated production in Sub Saharan Africa SSA Steeply rising commercial food import bills for staple crops across SSA are indicative of the level demand that is not being met from domestic production

The increase of area under equipped spate irrigation for the whole of Africa over the last ten years amounts to 1 27 million ha which is equal to about 127 000 ha a year This rate of growth has proved too low to have an impact on food import bills and buffer regional food security However within subregional trading groups there is scope for consolidation of market supply Irrigated production opportunities in SSA could be realised where natural resources and markets coincide but only through a great deal more attention to costs of production price formation effective water allocation mechanisms economically efficient water use and strong responsive institutions
