Automation, Skills and the Future of Work: What do Workers Think? Mr. Carlos Mulas-Granados, Richard Varghese, Vizhdan Boranova, Alice deChalendar, Judith Wallenstein, 2019-12-20 We exploit a survey data set that contains information on how 11 000 workers across advanced and emerging market economies perceive the main forces shaping the future of work In general workers feel more positive than negative about automation especially in emerging markets We find that negative perceptions about automation are prevalent among workers who are older poorer more exposed to job volatility and from countries with higher levels of robot penetration Perceptions over automation are positively viewed by workers with higher levels of job satisfaction higher educational attainment and from countries with stronger labor protection Workers with positive perceptions of automation also tend to respond that re education and retraining will be needed to adapt to rapidly evolving skill demands These workers expect governments to have a role in shaping the future of work through protection of labor and new forms of social benefits The demand for protection and benefits is more significant among women and workers that have suffered job volatility

People Get Ready Robert W. McChesney, John Nichols, 2016-03-08 Humanity is on the verge of its darkest hour or its greatest moment The consequences of the technological revolution are about to hit hard unemployment will spike as new technologies replace labor in the manufacturing service and professional sectors of an economy that is already struggling The end of work as we know it will hit at the worst moment imaginable as capitalism fosters permanent stagnation when the labor market is in decrepit shape with declining wages expanding poverty and scorching inequality Only the dramatic democratization of our economy can address the existential challenges we now face Yet the US political process is so dominated by billionaires and corporate special interests by corruption and monopoly that it stymies not just democracy but progress The great challenge of these times is to ensure that the tremendous benefits of technological progress are employed to serve the whole of humanity rather than to enrich the wealthy few Robert W McChesney and John Nichols argue that the United States needs a new economy in which revolutionary technologies are applied to effectively address environmental and social problems and used to rejuvenate and extend democratic institutions Based on intense reporting rich historical analysis and deep understanding of the technological and social changes that are unfolding they propose a bold strategy for democratizing our digital destiny before it s too late and unleashing the real power of the Internet and of humanity
