NATIONS Edward Khiwa PhD, 2013-02-04 SUMMARY Every nation should determine the future and the goals of public health in protecting its population. As Western nations such as tobacco companies of the United States, Britain, and others are improving their gross national products, they are instead exporting a major public health burden to the emerging nations. Mostly various kinds of cancer, especially lung cancer, which has had a high toll of mortality to the populations of different nations of the world. The World Health Organization, after decades and billions of dollars, later lost the fight against Malaria. The world has surrendered to the disease. Nothing left in the world except old wives' tales type of pseudo preventative measures that do nothing except put the population in a form of false security. The fight not only lost but the enemy has actually become stronger and we have nothing to further combat it. It is a raging fire that consumes without mercy. For many years the drug of choice was Chloroquine or quinine. During the Korean war in the 1950s many troops of an African or Mediterranean ethnic origin have exhibited severe allergic reaction to quinine. There it was discontinued and only Chloroquine was used. After many decades of Chloroquine use and misuse of Chloroquine resistant strain of Malaria made its appearance on the scientific scene in Southeast Asia and later the African continent. To date there is no medication available for the resistant Malaria. The best we have is a prophylactic dose of Chloroquine prior to traveling to an endemic area. This is still an effective measure only in the Americas where the Malaria is still sensitive to chloroquine. The resistant strain has a very wide range. It has been observed as far east as Afghanistan and Kazakhstan and as west as West Africa. The death rate is very high because of several common denominators. Most of these countries are overpopulated, poor health care programs, no preventative programs, mostly illiterate population, and most importantly very poor economic status. These countries mostly rely on outside help from the industrialized nations or the United Nations health care arm WHO. Consistent factors of all outside aid programs: they are very costly, usually without previous careful long range impact studies, in most cases are very short lived. The result in most cases is disastrous: the needy country usually is left with a white elephant health care program that is a failure and cannot afford to maintain on their own, either from a technical standpoint or from a financial shortage. For a long time we believed that more is bigger and better and the rest is history. Malnutrition further complicates the picture, complicates the picture. In economically poor countries their people are not able to take the proper nutrients to sustain good status of health. The malnourishment affects the immune system which as a result renders the population of the endemic areas with higher propensity to contract Malaria and other diseases as well. These conditions combined results in the outcome of increased incidence of the disease and shorter life expectancy of the patients. Furthermore the disease's vector Mosquito has become more resistant to eradication efforts and as a result its range has become increasingly greater every year. For many years the spray methods of wetlands, stagnant pools, and slow flowing streams have proven useless. Yet these methods continue. Why? The answer is very simple: it is cheap, available, easily applied, and most importantly politically convenient. But the reality is that these methods are a dismal failure; one only has to look at the numbers: increased incidence.

of Malaria and the increased range of the vector Poor sanitary practice due to lack of education and the financial means to build water treatment facilities or even the ability to supply fresh clean water have contributed to the spread of the most preventable of diseases Cholera disease caused by Vibrio cholerae

Challenging Perspectives on Organizational Change in Health Care Louise Fitzgerald, Aoife McDermott, 2017-04-21 This volume provides theory and research on organizational change and predominantly features the application of these ideas to the health care domain broadly defined It addresses enduring issues in advancing to an effective health care system The aim of this book is to offer an accessible and readable text aimed at provoking thought and questioning and aiding creativity It proffers arguments and ideas which are firmly based in empirical data and evidence so that the reader may make informed personal evaluations This book is designed to furnish a comprehensive theoretical basis for understanding organizational change in health care as well as selected core issues of contemporary and future importance to the provision of effective care within sustainable systems A series of coherent themes are addressed throughout the book from differing perspectives However every chapter has been written to stand alone and be read independently Each offers resources relevant to its focal topic in the form of references case studies and critique Setting out a future research agenda the book will be vital reading for organizational change researchers and practitioners in the healthcare industry
