Environmental Information In Developing Nations Politics And Policies:

Environmental Information in Developing Nations Anna Da Soledada Vieira, 1985-07-23 Vieira focuses on the relationship between environmental pollution and socioeconomic underdevelopment and emphasizes the role information can play in the protection of the Third World environment. She identifies the main governmental and nongovernmental institutions related to important aspects of the Third World environment: pollution control, sanitation, public health, and development and alternative technologies. The Brazilian institutional panorama is analyzed and then compared with Mexican, Indian, and Egyptian systems in an effort to identify common points that might be applied to the Third World as a whole. Finally, she recommends the establishment of an informal international network of both nongovernmental institutions and individuals for the exchange of information considered important to the developing countries or pertinent to the environmental realities of the Third World. Providing the core for such a network is an appendix listing organizations interested in the environment and development of the Third World.

International Environmental Law and Policy in Africa B. Chaytor, K.R. Gray, 2013-11-11 C O OKID11 I welcome the opportunity to prepare a Foreword to the book on Environmental Policy and Law in Africa edited by Kevin R Gray and Beatrice Chaytor. It is a pleasure to do that because the book is a contribution to the cause of capacity building for development and implementation of environmental law in Africa, a goal towards which I have had an undivided focus over the last two decades. There is still some belief in and outside Africa that for developing countries in general and Africa in particular, development and implementation of environmental law is not a priority. This belief prevails strongly in many quarters of the industrialised countries. In fact, the view is held either out of blatant ignorance or by some renegade industrialists who fail to appreciate Michael Royston's 1979 thesis that Pollution Prevention Pays. 2 That group for obvious reasons must have their correspondent counterparts in Africa to provide hope that industries rejected as derelict in the West or inoperable due to rigorous environmental regulation can find homes to which they can escape and dump their polluting industries.

Environmental Law in Developing Countries Marianela Cedeño Bonilla, 2004 This book contains a selection of papers on various legal issues of interest to developing countries which have been prepared by Fellows from InWent who came to Germany between 2002 and 2004 from Africa, Asia, and Latin America to research and write about subjects of their choice at the IUCN Environmental Law Centre.

Environmental Justice in Developing Countries Rhuks Ako, 2013-08-15 The evolving environmental justice paradigm is conceptualized differently based on political, economic, and historical factors. In developed countries, emphasis is placed on the role of individuals in environmental decision making and the protection of their access to the prerequisite environmental information and capacity to challenge environmental decisions is the main focus. However, in developing countries, access to land and natural resources are considered integral elements of the environmental justice paradigm. This book focuses on the conceptualization, recognition, and protection of environmental justice in developing countries. It explores the situation by engaging an analytical discourse of relevant legal provisions in four case study countries including Nigeria South Africa India and Papua New Guinea The comparative analysis of environmental justice in these countries present a framework within which to appreciate the conceptualization of the environmental justice paradigm      Globalization, Political Institutions and the Environment in Developing Countries Gabriele Spilker, 2013-01-04 Though industrialized countries are usually the ones indicted when environmental pollution is discussed over the few last years the rate of emissions in developing countries has increased by a startling amount The fallout from this increase is evidenced by the struggle of cities like Beijing to improve their air quality Yet there also exist developing countries such as Thailand that have managed to limit their emissions to more tolerable levels raising the question why are some developing countries more willing or able to take care of their environment than others In this volume Gabriele Spilker proposes two factors for the differences in developing countries environmental performance integration into the international system and domestic political institutions Focusing on developing countries generally but also closely examining important global powers such as China and India Spilker employs a rigorous quantitative analysis to demonstrate the importance of considering various aspects of the international system in order to draw more comprehensive conclusions about how globalization affects environmental performance She asserts that democratic political institutions can shield developing countries from the negative consequences of either trade or foreign direct investment But at the same time developing countries by avoiding demanding commitments are more likely to use environmental treaties as a cover than as a real plan of action Adding a new dimension to the existing body of research on environmental quality and commitment Spilker convincingly demonstrates how international and domestic political factors interact to shape developing countries ability and willingness to care for their natural environment      Environmental Policy, Governance and Politics Prakash

Chand Kandpal, 2024-07-26 This book traces the development environment discourse in India and examines the multi layered interaction between society and nature in the light of the role of the state judiciary and the civil society Through an array of perspectives the volume challenges the conventional approach to understanding the environmental politics in South Asia without considering the role of the civil society and other informal actors which has radically altered the conventional articulation of the phenomenon The volume underlines distinct structural characteristics of developmental politics in India and the social concerns and challenges which come in the way of environmental policy and governance in India It is a meaningful intervention in unearthing significant socio political and economic processes which are critical to the environmental governance in India The book will not only be helpful in studying the state of policy administration and politics of environmental discourse in India but also guide the policymakers to explore the sustainable ways of environmental governance in South Asia Insightful and lucid this book will be useful to the students researchers and faculty working in the field of political science public administration public policy political sociology political economy and governance studies It will also be an invaluable and interesting reading for those interested in South Asian studies      Ecological Policy and

Politics in Developing Countries Uday Desai, 1998-04-16 Examines in depth the ecological problems policies and politics of ten major developing countries

Environmental Politics and Foreign Policy Decision Making in Latin America Amy Below, 2014-12-05 Although the Kyoto Protocol an international agreement to address global climate change has been regarded by many as an unsuccessful treaty both politically and environmentally it stands as one of the world's few truly global agreements Why did such a diverse group of countries decide to sign and or ratify the treaty Why did they choose to do so at different times and in different ways What explains their foreign policy behavior Amy Below's book builds off the increasing significance of climate change and uses the Kyoto Protocol as a case study to analyze foreign policy decision making in Latin America Below's study takes a regional perspective in order to examine why countries in Latin America made disparate foreign policy choices when they were faced with the same decision The book looks at the decisions in Argentina Mexico and Venezuela via a process tracing method Below uses information obtained from primary and secondary documents and elite interviews to help reconstruct the processes and augments her reconstruction with a content analysis of Conference of the Parties speeches by presidents and country delegates The book complies with convention in the field by arguing that systemic national and individual level factors simultaneously impact foreign policy decisions but makes the additional claim that role theory most accurately accounts for relationships between variables Environmental Politics and Foreign Policy Decision Making in Latin America considers a variety of factors on individual national and international levels of analysis and show that the foreign policy decisions are best viewed through the prism of role theory The book also draws conclusions about the value of role theory in general and about environmental foreign policy decisions in developing countries which will be of value to both policy makers and academics
