Environment Int Trade Negotiat:

The EU as International Environmental Negotiator Tom Delreux, 2016-02-17 Delreux examines how the EU functions when it participates in international environmental negotiations. In particular, this book looks at the internal EU decision making process with regard to international negotiations that lead to multilateral environmental agreements. By studying eight such decision making processes, the book analyses how much negotiation autonomy or discretion the EU negotiator, the European Commission or the Council Presidency enjoys vis-à-vis the member states it represents and how this particular degree of discretion can be explained. The book's empirical evidence is based on extensive literature review, primary and semi-confidential document research as well as interviews with EU decision makers. It is aimed at a readership interested in EU politics and decision making, global multilateral governance, environmental policy science, and methodological development of Qualitative Comparative Analysis.

Climate Change and International Trade Rafael Leal-Arcas, 2013-01-01 Rafael Leal Arcas expertly examines the interface of climate change mitigation and international trade law with a view to addressing the question: How can we make best use of the international trading system experience to aim at a global climate change agreement? The insightful book contributes to developing the architecture for a post 2012 global climate agreement and in doing so seeks and proposes new approaches to climate change mitigation by linking it to the international trade system. The author suggests the adoption of a bottom-up approach to climate change negotiations by using the evolution of multilateral trade agreements as a model for reaching a global climate treaty. He discusses the innovative approach of inserting climate goals within regional trade agreements given their proliferation, especially bilateral, in the international trading system. He explains the trade implications of climate change mitigation policies by analyzing a couple of areas where the international regimes for trade and climate change mitigation may potentially clash. Climate Change and International Trade will strongly appeal to undergraduate and graduate students of international and European trade law, international and European environmental law, as well as social science academics, NGOs, think tanks, practitioners, researchers, and international organizations. They will also find plenty of valuable information in this timely resource.

Indigenous Peoples and International Trade John Borrows, Risa Schwartz, 2020-06-18 The United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples is seen primarily as an international human rights instrument. However, the Declaration also encompasses cultural, social, and economic rights. Taken in the context of international trade and investment, the UN Declaration is a valuable tool to support economic self-determination of Indigenous peoples. This volume explores the emergence of Indigenous peoples' participation in international trade and investment, as well as how it is shaping legal instruments in environment and trade, intellectual property, and traditional knowledge. One theme that is explored is agency. From amicus interventions at the World Trade Organization to developing a future precedent for a Trade and Indigenous Peoples Chapter, Indigenous peoples are asserting their right to participate in decision making. The authors, both Indigenous and non-Indigenous experts on trade and investment legal provide needed ideas and recommendations for governments academia and policy thinkers to achieve economic reconciliation      Environmental Protection, China and International Trade Fengan Jiang,2021-07-07 This book argues for a balanced approach to greening the World Trade Organization WTO ban on China s export duties without opening the floodgates to protectionism As a result of the China Raw Materials and China Rare Earths decisions China is largely prohibited from using export duties to address environmental problems including those associated with climate change This is despite a number of climate studies having suggested that Chinese export duties could be useful for reducing carbon leakage an issue of international concern This book puts the case for a more balanced approach It shows that a harsh ban on China s export duties constrains its policy space to protect the environment particularly in the context of climate change The work presents feasibility tests for various legal solutions that have been discussed for adjusting the ban and it accordingly proposes a more feasible approach that would allow China to help protect the environment without advancing protectionism The proposed legal option provides a less protectionist alternative to export duties namely export duties plus export duties in combination with supplementary restrictions on Chinese consumption This analysis also yields insights regarding ways to correct WTO precedents which suggests a moderate alternative response to an important issue behind the Appellate Body crisis The book will be a valuable resource for academics researchers and policymakers in the areas of International Trade Law Environmental Law and China      International Trade and the Environment United States.

International Trade Regulation and the Mitigation of Climate Change Thomas Cottier, Olga Nartova, Sadeq Z. Bigdeli, 2009-09-24. What can trade regulation contribute towards ameliorating the GHG emissions and reducing their concentrations in the atmosphere? This collection of essays analyses options for climate change mitigation through the lens of the trade lawyer. By examining international law and, in particular, the relevant WTO agreements, the authors address the areas of potential conflict between international trade law and international law on climate mitigation and, where possible, suggest ways to strengthen mutual supportiveness between the two regimes. They do so taking into account the drivers of human-induced climate change in energy markets and of consumption.

Environmental Negotiator Handbook Aleksandr Sergeevich Timoshenko, 2003-01-01. Protection of the human environment and sustainable development of the world increasingly manifest themselves through negotiation and enforcement of internationally agreed legal rules and standards. International environmental negotiation has become a common format to design norms that affect national and international legal orders and influence the behavior of various stakeholders. Accordingly, international environmental negotiations attract multiple players from sovereign States to environmental NGOs to the business community and civil society. The growing complexity of international environmental negotiations demands, in order to make the process effective, a comprehensive and adequate preparation of all actors. The Environmental Negotiator Handbook is designed as a single-volume tool that equips participants of international environmental negotiations with a structured description and analysis of the negotiating process. All stages of the development of international environmental agreements are carefully followed, researched, commented on, and illustrated with multiple documentary examples. The book traces the process from the pre-negotiation stage to actual implementation of the agreed regime. The book also includes a large collection of essential international texts to be at hand for representatives at international environmental negotiations. This volume is aimed at a wide range of readers, including government officials, staff of relevant intergovernmental organizations and secretariats, non-governmental organizations, practicing lawyers, and academic scholars The book is based on thirty years of the author's career in international environmental law

Environment, Human Rights and International Trade Francesco Francioni, 2001-07-13 After the completion of the Uruguay Round and the adoption of the 1994 agreement establishing the WTO the place of international trade in the context of the international legal order has radically changed International trade law has become a subject of wide spread interest cutting across traditional boundaries and engaging diverse political and legal concerns One consequence of this development is increasing concern with the legitimacy of the WTO process which in turn has led to the WTO becoming the focus of rancorous protest by among others environmental NGOs trade unions and human rights activists This collection of essays by leading scholars and lawyers engaged in the policy making process addresses the underlying tensions and dilemmas of the WTO process and its impact upon the environment and human rights in particular The contributors search for a balance between on the one hand legitimate free trade interests and on the other the role and limits of unilateral measures as an instrument to protect non commercial values The essays thus range over a host of topical questions including trade in GMOs biosafety in intellectual property rights technology transfer and environmental protection trade and labour rights child labour standards the EU and WTO MERCOSUR and many other topics The contributors include Thomas Schoenbaum Andrea Bianchi Chris McCrudden Michael Spence Sarah Cleveland Patricia Hansen Riccardo Pavoni and Francesco Francioni

International Trade and Climate Change World Bank, 2007-10-15 Climate change remains a global challenge requiring international collaborative action Another area where countries have successfully committed to a long term multilateral resolution is the liberalization of international trade Integration into the world economy has proven a powerful means for countries to promote economic growth development and poverty reduction The broad objectives of the betterment of current and future human welfare are shared by both global trade and climate regimes Yet both climate and trade agendas have evolved largely independently through the years despite their mutually supporting objectives Since global emission goals and global trade objectives are shared policy objectives of most countries and nearly all of the World Bank's clients it makes sense to consider the two sets of objectives together This book is one of the first comprehensive attempts to look at the synergies between climate change and trade objectives from economic legal and institutional perspectives It addresses an important policy question how changes in trade policies and international cooperation on trade policies can help address global environmental spillovers especially GHG emissions and what the potential effects of national environmental policies that are aimed at global environmental problems might be for trade and investment It explores opportunities for aligning development and energy policies in such a way that they could stimulate production trade and investment in cleaner technology options

International Trade and Climate Change Policies Duncan Brack, 2013-10-11 Focusing on the likely impacts on trade of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change and the Kyoto Protocol this book examines the actual and potential conflicts between whether liberalization of trade undermines the efforts of industrialised countries to mitigate climate change It will be essential reading for environmental economists and those engaged in international environmental relations and policy

Realigning International Trade Negotiation Asymmetry Ms. Olajumoke Omoniyi Oduwole, 2011

Recently it has become apparent to developing countries in the WTO that their limited bargaining power has in fact been a stumbling block to obtaining desired negotiation outcomes in the multilateral trade system Thus to execute any fundamental changes to the status quo there was a need to cluster together pool resources and form alliances to leverage their collective strength in the negotiations What remained unclear however was what role this increased coalition activity by developing countries played in the current WTO negotiations process Therefore the primary purpose of this dissertation is to describe how this shift toward coalitions as a negotiation strategy by developing countries occurred and to consider the possible implications of this coalition strategy for the future of the multilateral trading system Due to the complexity of the Doha Round I restricted my area of study to the Doha Round agriculture negotiations as a single case study since agriculture is the undisputed locomotive of the Round having set the tone for the majority of the negotiations Using qualitative data I captured a contextual description of four developing country agriculture coalitions Cotton 4 G 20 G 33 and G 90 as nested cases throughout the agriculture negotiation process from March 2003 to March 2010 I described the function of developing country coalitions in the negotiations by comparing and contrasting aspects of each coalition s negotiation strategy or tactics during the research study period In sum I investigate my preliminary assessment of the reason coalition strategy emerged as the dominant negotiation tool for developing countries in this particular WTO Round I then describe how these coalitions maneuvered in the ongoing negotiations during the study period At the end of my descriptive comparative analysis I was able to explain the significance of coalitions as a strategic tool for developing countries in WTO trade rules negotiations as well as assess the specific role that each of the four case study coalitions have played in the negotiation process In conclusion the study highlights some of the lessons learned from developing country coalition strategy in this Round The information derived could serve as a platform for further research in this area and eventually explain the raison d tre behind the negotiated outcomes
