Fighting On Two Fronts:

Fighting on Two Fronts James E. Westheider, 1997-04-01 The racial tensions that have long plagued American society exist to a much lesser extent in the military where the bond of common pursuit and shared experience renders race less relevant Or so conventional wisdom has long held In this dramatic history of race relations during the Vietnam war James E Westheider illustrates how American soldiers in Vietnam grappled with many of the same racial conflicts that were tearing apart their homeland thousands of miles away Over seven years in the making Fighting on Two Fronts draws on interviews with dozens of Vietnam veterans black and white and official Pentagon documents to paint the first complete picture of the African American experience in Vietnam Westheider reveals how preconceptions and petty misunderstandings often exacerbated racial anxieties during the conflict Military barbers for instance were often inexperienced with black hair leading black soldiers to cut each other's hair an act perceived as separatist by their white counterparts Similarly black soldiers often greeted one another with a ritualized handshake or dap as a sign of solidarity the unfamiliarity of which threatened many white soldiers and was a source of resentment until it was banned in 1973 Despite ample evidence of institutional racism in the armed forces the military elite responded only when outbreaks of racial violence became disruptive enough to threaten military discipline and attract negative attention from the civilian world A crucial addition to our understanding of Vietnam Fighting on Two Fronts is a compelling example of the new military history at its finest

Recovering the U.S. Hispanic Literary Heritage, Volume IV Jose Aranda, Silvio Torres-Saillant, 2002-11-30 This historic fourth volume of articles represents the finished re worked product of the biennial conferences of recovery providing theoretical and practical approaches and critical studies on specific texts Jose Aranda and Silvio Torres Saillant s introduction conceptualizes and unifies a broad historical swath that encompasses the Spanish and English language expression of Hispanic natives immigrants and exiles from the colonial period to 1960

Desegregation of the U.S. Armed Forces Richard M. Dalfiume,1969 During the years between 1939 and 1953 the United States armed forces moved from a policy of restricting and segregating the Negro soldier based largely on racial stereotypes that emerged from World War I to a policy of equal opportunity and integration Most writers point to 1954 or later as the origin of the Negro Revolution however this history of what was in the past an important issue for black Americans sheds light on the forgotten years of the Negro Revolution particularly World War II The war s democratic rhetoric had a great impact on the nation s largest minority a fact overlooked by most scholars The hypocritical position of the United States fighting with a racially segregated armed forces to uphold the four freedoms and to defeat an enemy preaching a master race ideology provided Negro Americans with a clear illustration of the difference between the American creed and practice and a powerful argument in their struggle for equality The postwar era made it impossible for the Federal Government and the American people to ignore the race issue any longer The Truman Administrations legislative proposals and actions in the field of Negro rights set the pattern for a continuing federal improvement No longer was it the Federal Government s policy to condone or extend segregation Of the Truman Administrations precedent breaking actions in this area desegregation of the armed forces was among the first The President as Commander in chief could move in this area without legislation from a reluctant Congress Truman s Executive Order 9981 of July 1948 which established the President s Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services was one of the first federal actions against the separate but equal doctrine coming six years before the 1954 school desegregation decision of the Supreme Court A reluctant Army was finally convinced of the wisdom of desegregation when the new policy proved a success in the Korean War a success that provided a powerful argument for those who sought an end to segregation in the United States This was truly a social revolution and the result is indicated by the fact that to this day the armed forces remain the most integrated institution in American society Jacket

Liberators Lou Potter,1992-10-01 The untold story of the African American soldiers who battled fascism in Europe and racism at home The first black tankers ever to enter combat the 761st Battalion bore the brunt of harassment from all sides This gripping historical narrative filled with interviews and 150 exceptional photographs ties in to a PBS documentary special on the 761st airing this fall

Contested Valor Cameron D. McCoy,2023-11-16 Contested Valor is a challenging examination of the use and status of black Marines in United States military service during the Cold War era These pioneering men experienced contested military integration as well as multiple forms of institutional and social opposition which called their humanity manhood and rights to full citizenship into question Efforts to undermine their service compromised their right to be counted among the elite and sidelined their story to the fringes of Marine Corps and U S history Cameron McCoy describes the factors and pressures leading to the racial turbulence that surfaced in the Marine Corps from the end of World War II through Vietnam and the measures taken by civilian and Marine officials to maintain and restore organizational integrity based on a foundation of white supremacy He examines the psychological effects of institutionalized racism on African American Marines during the Vietnam era and the emergence of a new generation of black men unwilling to submit to the traditions of a Jim Crow Marine Corps By exploring the realities American society constructed about black Marines this work calls attention to the diverse ways in which these men coped within a strict prejudiced organization and found greater purpose as U S Marines despite an embattled image Contested Valor weaves the experiences of black Americans in the armed forces into the larger tapestry of the American racist past and aptly captures the dilemmas triumphs and pitfalls that the first African American Marines encountered during the contentious eras of World War II Korea and Vietnam McCoy explores the creation of organizational policies designed to minimize their footprint as U S Marines until the social experiment of military integration faded and illustrates the discriminatory practices that further delegitimized their wartime reputation McCoy demonstrates that black Marines absence from the historical record has been compounded by the negligence and oversight of past historians as the Marine Corps reckons with its racist past and its first black Marines

AfroAsian Encounters Heike Raphael-Hernandez, Shannon Steen, 2006-11 How might we understand yellowface performances by African Americans in 1930s swing adaptations of Gilbert and Sullivan s The Mikado Paul Robeson s support of Asian and Asian American struggles or the absorption of hip hop by Asian American youth culture AfroAsian Encounters is the first anthology to look at the mutual influence of and relationships between members of the African and Asian diasporas in the Americas While these two groups have often been thought of as occupying incommensurate if not opposing cultural and political positions scholars from history literature media and the visual arts here trace their interconnections and interactions as well as how they have been set in opposition by white systems of racial domination AfroAsian Encounters probes beyond popular culture to trace the historical lineage of these coalitions from the post Civil War era through the present From the history of Japanese jazz composers to the current popularity of black Asian buddy films like Rush Hour AfroAsian Encounters is a groundbreaking intervention into studies of race and ethnicity and a crucial look at the shifting meaning of race in America in the twenty first century

The Fortnightly, 1915 The Fortnightly Review, 1915 World War II, Film, and History John Whiteclay Chambers II, David Culbert, 1996-10-10 The immediacy and perceived truth of the visual image as well as film and television s ability to propel viewers back into the past place the genre of the historical film in a special category War films including antiwar films have established the prevailing public image of war in the twentieth century For American audiences the dominant image of trench warfare in World War I has been provided by feature films such as All Quiet on the Western Front and Paths of Glory The image of combat in the Second World War has been shaped by films like Sands of Iwo Jima and The Longest Day And despite claims for the alleged impact of widespread television coverage of the Vietnam War it is actually films such as Apocalypse Now and Platoon which have provided the most powerful images of what is seen as the reality of that much disputed conflict But to what degree does history written with lightning as Woodrow Wilson allegedly said represent the reality of the past To what extent is visual history an oversimplification or even a distortion of the past Exploring the relationship between moving images and the society and culture in which they were produced and received World War II Film and History addresses the power these images have had in determining our perception and memories of war Examining how the public memory of war in the twentieth century has often been created more by a manufactured past than a remembered one a leading group of historians discusses films dating from the early 1930s through the early 1990s created by filmmakers the world over from the United States and Germany to Japan and the former Soviet Union For example Freda Freiberg explains how the inter racial melodramatic Japanese feature film China Nights in which a manly and protective Japanese naval officer falls in love with a beautiful young Chinese street waif and molds her into a cultured submissive wife proved enormously popular with wartime Japanese and helped justify the invasion of China in the minds of many Japanese viewers Peter Paret assesses the historical accuracy of Kolberg as a depiction of an unsuccessful siege of that German city by a French Army in 1807 and explores how the film released by Hitler's regime in January 1945 explicitly called for civilian sacrifice and last ditch resistance Stephen Ambrose contrasts what we know about the historical reality of the Allied D Day landings in Normandy on June 6 1944 with the 1962 release of The Longest Day in which the major climactic moment in the film never happened at Normandy Alice Kessler Harris examines The Life and Times of Rosie the Riveter a 1982 film documentary about women defense workers on the American home front in World War II emphasizing the degree to which the documentary's engaging main characters and its message of the need for fair and equal treatment for women resonates with many contemporary viewers And Clement Alexander Price contrasts Men of Bronze William Miles's fine documentary about black American soldiers who fought in France in World War I with Liberators the controversial documentary by Miles and Nina Rosenblum which incorrectly claimed that African American troops liberated Holocaust survivors at Dachau in World War II In today's visually oriented world powerful images even images of images are circulated in an eternal cycle gaining increased acceptance through repetition History becomes an endless loop in which repeated images validate and reconfirm each other Based on archival materials many of which have become only recently available World War II Film and History offers an informative and a disturbing look at the complex relationship between national myths and filmic memory as well as the dangers of visual images being transformed into reality

The Making of New Germany Philipp Scheidemann, 1929

Visas and Walls Nazli Avdan, 2019-02-01 Borders traditionally served to insulate nations from other states and to provide bulwarks against intrusion by foreign armies In the age of terrorism borders are more frequently perceived as protection against threats from determined individuals arriving from elsewhere After a deadly terrorist attack leaders immediately encounter pressure to close their borders As Nazli Avdan observes cracking down on border crossings and policing migration enhance security However the imperatives of globalization demand that borders remain open to legal travel and economic exchange While stricter border policies may be symbolically valuable and pragmatically safer according to Avdan they are economically costly restricting trade between neighbors and damaging commercial ties In Visas and Walls Avdan argues that the balance between economics and security is contingent on how close to home threats whether actual or potential originate When terrorist events affect the residents of a country or take place within its borders economic ties matter less When terrorist violence strikes elsewhere and does not involve its citizens the unaffected state's investment in globalization carries the day Avdan examines the visa waiver programs and visa control policies of several countries in place in 2010 including Turkey's migration policies analyzes the visa issuance practices of the European Union from 2003 until 2015 and explores how terrorism and trade affected states' propensities to build border walls in the post World War II era Her findings challenge the claim that border crackdowns are a reflexive response to terrorist violence and qualify globalists' assertions that economic globalization makes for open borders Visas and Walls encourages policymakers and leaders to consider more broadly the effects of economic interdependence on policies governing borders and their permeability The
