Local Success And Federal Failure:

The Metropolitan Frontier and American Politics Daniel Elazar, 2020-03-10 American civilization has been shaped by four decisive forces: the frontier, migration, sectionalism, and federalism. The frontier has offered abundance to those who could take advantage of its opportunities, stimulated technological innovation, and been the source of continuous change in social structure and economic organization. Migration has been responsible for relocating cultures from the Old World to the New. Various sections of geographic territories have adjusted to the overall American culture without losing their individual distinctiveness, and federalism has shaped the United States' political and social organization. The Metropolitan Frontier and American Politics was begun in the late 1950s under the auspices of the University of Illinois Institute of Government and Public Affairs as a study of the eight lesser metropolitan areas in Illinois. What started out as a design for community maps of each area with the intent to outline their particular political systems led to a major study of metropolitan cities of the prairie heartland area between the Great Lakes and the Continental Divide with an examination of the processes that have shaped American politics. The distinctive features of the geographic areas that Elazar discovered can best be understood as reflections of the differences in cultural backgrounds of their respective settlers. Proper understanding of these communities therefore requires an examination of their place in the federal system, the impact of frontier and section upon them, and a study of the cultures that inform them as civil communities. The volume is consequently divided into three parts: Cities, Frontiers, and Sections. Streams of Migration and Political Culture, and Cities, States, and Nation, each of which explores Elazar's concerns in discovering the interrelationship between the cities of the frontier and American politics. A prequel to The Closing of the American Mind, The Metropolitan Frontier and American Politics will be of great interest to students of politics, American history, and ethnography.

Stability and Change Sheila Rosenblum, Karen Seashore Louis, 2013-03-13 Nearly a century ago Emile Durkheim founded the sociology of education on the French cultural and structural premise that the function of educators is to transmit culture from one generation to the next. The clarity of his vision was aided by the era, the place, and the actors in the learning environment. His was an era when the relatively seamless web of western culture, although ripping and straining, was still intact. The place, post-Napoleonic France, was vertically stratified and elaborately structured. And the teachers had reason to think they were agents of authority, whereas most students during school hours at least behaved as if they were the objects of that authority. Underlying the very notion of a sociology of education then was a visible and pervasive aura of a system and order that was culturally prescribed. Scholars of American education have yearned for such systems before and since Durkheim. Every European and English model has been emulated in a more or less winsome manner, from the Boston Latin School of the 1700s to the Open Education programs of the 1960s. In the last quarter century of research, it has begun to dawn on us, however, that no matter how hard American educators try, they do not build a system.

Kamarck,2016-07-26 Failure should not be an option in the presidency but for too long it has been the norm From the botched attempt to rescue the U S diplomats held hostage by Iran in 1980 under President Jimmy Carter and the missed intelligence on Al Qaeda before 9 11 under George W Bush to most recently the computer meltdown that marked the arrival of health care reform under Barack Obama the American presidency has been a profile in failure In Why Presidents Fail and How They Can Succeed Again Elaine Kamarck surveys these and other recent presidential failures to understand why Americans have lost faith in their leaders and how they can get it back Kamarck argues that presidents today spend too much time talking and not enough time governing and that they have allowed themselves to become more and more distant from the federal bureaucracy that is supposed to implement policy After decades of imperial and rhetorical presidencies we are in need of a managerial president This White House insider and former Harvard academic explains the difficulties of governing in our modern political landscape and offers examples and recommendations of how our next president can not only recreate faith in leadership but also run a competent successful administration Elementary and Secondary Education Amendments of 1973 United States.
