An Enquiry Concerning Human Understanding David Hume, 1991-01-01 Moral philosophy or the science of human nature may be treated after two different manners each of which has its peculiar merit and may contribute to the entertainment instruction and reformation of mankind The one considers man chiefly as born for action and as influenced in his measures by taste and sentiment pursuing one object and avoiding another according to the value which these objects seem to possess and according to the light in which they present themselves As virtue of all objects is allowed to be the most valuable this species of philosophers paint her in the most amiable colours borrowing all helps from poetry and eloquence and treating their subject in an easy and obvious manner and such as is best fitted to please the imagination and engage the affections They select the most striking observations and instances from common life place opposite characters in a proper contrast and alluring us into the paths of virtue by the views of glory and happiness direct our steps in these paths by the soundest precepts and most illustrious examples They make us feel the difference between vice and virtue they excite and regulate our sentiments and so they can but bend our hearts to the love of probity and true honour they think that they have fully attained the end of all their labours The other species of philosophers consider man in the light of a reasonable rather than an active being and endeavour to form his understanding more than cultivate his manners They regard human nature as a subject of speculation and with a narrow scrutiny examine it in order to find those principles which regulate our understanding excite our sentiments and make us approve or blame any particular object action or behaviour They think it a reproach to all literature that philosophy should not yet have fixed beyond controversy the foundation of morals reasoning and criticism and should for ever talk of truth and falsehood vice and virtue beauty and deformity without being able to determine the source of these distinctions While they attempt this arduous task they are deterred by no difficulties but proceeding from particular instances to general principles they still push on their enquiries to principles more general and rest not satisfied till they arrive at those original principles by which in every science all human curiosity must be bounded Though their speculations seem abstract and even unintelligible to common readers they aim at the approbation of the learned and the wise and think themselves sufficiently compensated for the labour of their whole lives if they can discover some hidden truths which may contribute to the instruction of posterity

Hume's 1748 Enquiry Concerning Human Understanding is a modern philosophical classic that helped reshape epistemology and the philosophy of knowledge. It is also a classic of the critical thinking skills of analysis and reasoning. Analysis is all about understanding how arguments work and fit together. Having strong analytical skills helps to break down arguments, pull out the evidence on which they rely, and understand the kinds of implicit assumptions and reasons on which they work. Reasoning meanwhile means building and presenting arguments forming well-structured, evidenced, and organised cases for a particular point of view. Hume applied his analytical skills to arguments about how humans know and understand the world and how our minds work. At base, he was trying to analyse human reason itself to show the workings and limitations of the human mind and show the origins of our beliefs. Hume went on to apply his reasoning skills, creating an enduring argument about the nature of human knowledge. The result was one of the most striking and famous works in the history of philosophy.

An Enquiry Concerning Human Understanding David Hume, 2011-09-20 After his three volume Treatise of Human Nature dropped like a rock to the bottom of the pool of British philosophic writing Hume set out to write a briefer more accessible version the Enquiry concerning Human Understanding One of the early points it makes is that most endeavors to write about the nature of thought are hopeless and nearly impossible to understand With that disclaimer Hume sets out to contradict himself by writing lucidly about while candidly acknowledging the severe limits of this topic He uses logic to show that most human understanding falls into two categories a very small group of innate truths deducible by logic like every triangle has three sides and a much larger group nearly everything we know which is based on reality based observation This latter group always has at a fundamental level an element of probabilistic assumption Things customarily happened this way before so they probably will again Thus almost everything we think we know about the world is based on empirical experience not pure logic A must read for anyone with even a passing interest in philosophy or modern thought An Enquiry Concerning Human Understanding is primarily concerned with the psychological question of the origin of our concepts About the answer to this question the empiricists were all agreed our concepts are furnished by experience which includes both sensory experience and introspection i e the experience of our own mental states
