Environmental Problem Solving Psychosocial Barriers To Adaptive Change:

Environmental Problem Solving Alan Miller, 2013-12-01 Human influences create both environmental problems and barriers to effective policy aimed at addressing those problems. In effect, environmental managers manage people as much as they manage the environment. Therefore, they must gain an understanding of the psychological and sociopolitical dimensions of environmental problems that they are attempting to resolve. In Environmental Problem Solving, Alan Miller reappraises conventional analyses of environmental problems using lessons from the psychosocial disciplines. He combines the disciplines of ecology, political sociology, and psychology to produce a more adaptive approach to problem solving that is specifically geared toward the environmental field. Numerous case studies demonstrate the practical application of theory in a way that is useful to technical and scientific professionals as well as to policy makers and planners. Alan Miller is Professor of Psychology at the University of New Brunswick.

Environmental Problem-solving A. Miller, 1982 Adaptive Management of Natural Resources George H. Stankey, 2005 This report reviews the extensive and growing literature on the concept and application of adaptive management. Adaptive management is a central element of the Northwest Forest Plan and there is a need for an informed understanding of the key theories, concepts, and frameworks upon which it is founded. Literature from a diverse range of fields including social learning, risk, and uncertainty, and institutional analysis was reviewed, particularly as it related to application in an adaptive management context. The review identifies opportunities as well as barriers that adaptive management faces. It concludes by describing steps that must be taken to implement adaptive management.

Okie,2017-03-29 This interdisciplinary book challenges current approaches to environmental problems that perpetuate flawed but deeply embedded cultural beliefs about the role of science and technology in society The authors elucidate and interrogate a cultural history of solutionism that typifies expectations that science can should and will reduce risk to people and property by containing and controlling biophysical phenomena Using historical analysis eco evolutionary principles and case studies on floods radioactive waste and epidemics the authors show that perceived solutions to environmental problems generate new problems leading to problem solution cycles of increasing scope and complexity The authors encourage readers to challenge the ideology of solutionism by considering the potential of language social action and new paradigms of sustainability to shape management systems This book will appeal to scholars in multi and interdisciplinary fields such as Environment Studies Environmental Science Environmental Policy and Science Technology and Society Studies

Research Paper PNW. ,1978 Environmental Anthropology Helen Kopnina,Eleanor Shoreman-Ouimet,2013-07-18 This volume presents new theoretical approaches methodologies subject pools and topics in the field of environmental anthropology Environmental anthropologists are increasingly focusing on self reflection not just on themselves and their impacts on environmental research but also on the reflexive qualities of their subjects and the extent to which these individuals are questioning their own environmental behavior Here contributors confront the very notion of natural resources in granting non human species their subjectivity and arguing for deeper understanding of nature and wilderness beyond the label of ecosystem services By engaging in interdisciplinary efforts these anthropologists present new ways for their colleagues subjects peers and communities to understand the causes of and alternatives to environmental destruction This book demonstrates that environmental anthropology has moved beyond the construction of rural small group theory entering into a mode of solution based methodologies and interdisciplinary theories for understanding human environmental interactions It is focused on post rural existence health and environmental risk assessment on the realm of alternative actions and emphasizes the necessary steps towards preventing environmental crisis Issues in Bioethics and the Concept of Scale William Andrew Cook,2008 Issues in Bioethics and the Concept of Scale arose from the author s deep and committed interest in ecology moral philosophy and medicine and how they are interrelated William A Cook expands on the recognition that spatial and temporal scale characteristics are factors in the understanding and modeling of ecological systems and in decision making around ecological and environmental issues and introduces this dynamic to the field of bioethics The concept of scale from hierarchy theory as it is used in ecology to deal with the complexity and interrelationships of systems is explored and identified as a factor and potential source of conflict in the field of bioethics This notion of scale is conceptually useful for considering the complexity of some bioethical issues Ensuring Greater Yellowstone's Future Susan Gail Quantifying Environmental Impact Assessments Using Fuzzy Logic Richard B. Shepard,2006-10-14 Environmental impact assessments are required for a wide range of projects throughout the world These assessments have increasingly involved complex political decision making and incorporated values and beliefs of both stakeholders and interested parties However the results are often ineffective because values and beliefs are not easily quantifiable and decisions are considered subjective This analysis recognizes these problems and proposes practical methods based on fuzzy logic that will enable people preparing assessments to define terms and quantify opinions and input so that they are agreed upon by all involved parties Fuzzy logic also quantifies the complex environmental economic and social conditions that are present and are predicted by project alternatives The author places special emphasis on the types of issues that frequently arise in NEPA environmental assessments and environmental impact statements and in similar regulations that are used in jurisdictions regionally and internationally The new methods are intended to reduce the time and cost of assessments while producing justifiable results First issues related to current environmental impact assessment methods are discussed Then the book discusses how lessons learned from computational intelligence can address these problems It describes how a systematic logical approach to environmental assessment can be applied to a variety of complex situations Finally the design and implementation of a more objective and powerful assessment is demonstrated through a worked example Explanations of computational intelligence techniques and discussions of helpful software are intended to benefit those people actually preparing and using environmental assessments in language that makes the process transparent and transferable to all types of systems

Towards the Formation of a Sustainable South Florida Arthur Oyola-Yemaiel,2000 This dissertation examines the sociological process of conflict resolution and consensus building in South Florida Everglades Ecosystem Restoration through what I define as a Network Management Coordinative Interstitial Group NetMIG The process of conflict resolution can be summarized as the participation of interested and affected parties stakeholders in a forum of negotiation I study the case of the Governor s Commission for a Sustainable South Florida GCSSF that was established to reduce social conflict Such conflict originated from environmental disputes about the Everglades and was manifested in the form of gridlock among regulatory government agencies Indian tribes as well as agricultural environmental conservationist and urban development interests The purpose of the participatory forum is to reduce conflicts of interest and to achieve consensus with the ultimate goal of restoration of the original Everglades ecosystem while cultivating the economic and cultural bases of the communities in the area Further the forum aims to formulate consensus through envisioning a common sustainable community by providing means to achieve a balance between human and natural systems Data were gathered using participant observation and document analysis techniques to conduct a theoretically based analysis of the role of the Network Management Coordinative Interstitial Group NetMIG I use conflict resolution theory environmental conflict theory stakeholder analysis systems theory differentiation and social change theory and strategic management and planning theory The purpose of this study is to substantiate the role of the Governor s Commission for a Sustainable South Florida GCSSF as a consortium of organizations in an effort to resolve conflict rather than an ethnographic study of this organization Environmental restoration of the Everglades is a vehicle for recognizing the significance of a Network Management Coordinative Interstitial Group NetMIG namely the Governor s Commission for a Sustainable South Florida GCSSF as a structural mechanism for stakeholder participation in the process of social conflict resolution through the creation of new cultural paradigms for a sustainable community
