finds no evidence that PFM quality matters for deficit and debt ratios irrespective of whether a country is fragile or not The report also explores the relationship between perceptions of corruption and PFM performance It finds strong evidence of a relationship between better PFM performance and improvements in perceptions of corruption It also finds that PFM reforms associated with better controls have a stronger relationship with improvements in perceptions of corruption compared to PFM reforms associated with more transparency The last chapter looks at the relationship between PEFA indicators for revenue administration and domestic resource mobilization It focuses on the credible use of penalties for noncompliance as a proxy for the type of political commitment required to improve tax performance The analysis shows that countries that credibly enforce penalties for noncompliance collect more taxes on average administration to understand the financial and accounting aspects of managing public services
