Experimenting for the Next Economy in Rotterdam's "City-Ports"
The Port of Rotterdam has to prepare for a fossil-free and circular future. This involves major changes for overhead, storage and production activities in the port area. As a consequence, what the relation between port and city is changing. With the reclamation of the Central Waterway, large-scale dredging and heavy industry has gradually moved into the sea and land and buildings in the port area. One of the city has been one subject to redevelopment. Instead of the traditional "top-down, city-as-a-whole" of Rotterdam, and the City of Rotterdam nowadays adopts a "city-part" approach, creating city-part areas in which the opportunities of the Next Economy are explored.

BUILDING ROTTERDAM INNOVATION DISTRICT FROM RDM CAMPUS AND SECOND-INDUSTRY (SME) AREAS
The Rotterdam Innovation District (RID) encompasses the Next Economy in building two distinct port areas:
- The world renowned RDM Campus on the site of a former dry-dock company manufacturing the major parts of university-industry-government relationships, fostering innovation.
- The Water-Workshops (WW) areas as a first planned redevelopment following the Quadruple Helix, viewing in the perspective of civil society in knowledge production and innovation, and the concept of the Living Lab.

CHALLENGE OF BUILDING CAMPUS AND LIVING LAB FOR OPEN INNOVATION
Both areas within the RID are very different. This resulted in two distinct approaches of redevelopment with different preliminary results. A timely organized redevelopment project resulting in a complex environment versus a heavily organized regional redevelopment process resulting in several Lab-as-add-on-like innovation developments. We have explored these differences from the perspective of opportunities for research and learning using movement conceptual models of multi-network and single and double-loop learning to make the challenge of building both areas into one innovation district more explicit.

RDM CAMPUS, PORT AUTHORITY'S AND EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS MATERIALIZE THE TRIPLE-HELIX IN INDUSTRIAL HERITAGE
Since 2003 until 2006, the RDM Campus was transformed into a campus, on the initiative of the Rotterdam University of Applied Sciences, Abdo College and the Port of Rotterdam Authority. The old site of the Rotterdam Dry Dock Company has already been heavily built transformed into an inspiring and distinctive place for research, education and entrepreneurship.

The concept of RDM Campus is based on the concept of the Triple Helix of university-industry-government relationships initiated in the 1990s by Etzkowitz.

Now, about a thousand students follow (in part) of their education in the 22,000 m² Innovation Dock that houses four 2D companies and there are regular congresses and large-scale events in the Congress Centre and the 4,000 m² Submarine World. In the adjacent water basin a new experimental and testing facility Aqua Dock opens space for innovations in the field of floating infrastructure. The Port of Rotterdam Authority invests more than 100 million euros in RDM Campus.

WATER-WORKSHOPS (WW) AREAS AS A FIRST PLANNED REDEVELOPMENT OF THE QUADRUPLE-HELIX
In 2004, after years of applying a traditional plan-led "top-down, city-as-a-whole" approach to the development of the 100 hectares area which – under the influence of the economic crisis – did not lead to the foreseen results, fundaments that of Rotterdam and City of Rotterdam changed to an "organic" area development strategy. The new strategy is not so much a plan, as it is an open invitation to all actors able to connect the port with the city. Stimulate these manufacturing capacity in open-tech, medical technology and food. The open character of this invitation allows for new structures of collaboration in the redevelopment of the area to emerge from latent local networks and bottom-up initiatives. This approach resembles the Quadruple Helix thinking in the perspective of civil society in innovation as introduced by Chesbrough and Spohrer in the 2000's.

The open development of WW institutionalizes a process which was already underway. During the economic crisis vacant properties in the area were taken up by small companies and initiatives that may be categorized as makers. The Makers movement embodies the Next Economy. They share facilities and experiment by rapid prototyping. These entrepreneurs strive for a positive impact on their surroundings, creating jobs for underprivileged and improving local environmental conditions. Examples in WW are technology and art driven design companies like Space Design and Studio Reconcept, also cooperation Made in Rotteam facilitating designers and Dutch-Chinese connecting, offering and growing with a platform for manufacturing and the Food Estate and/or in Eigen Sted (art and design) and saving local green processes, checked and fresh.

CONCLUSION: WHAT CAN WE LEARN?
In WW the learning loop for the evolution of the Triple Helix stands with the learning loop that comes with an open or "organic" development process.

The redevelopment of the area itself is part of innovation: a Living Lab, where co-creation, exploration, experimentation and evaluation bring together public and private actors, both as companies and associations, and individuals to "test" new services to citizens. The challenge for RID is to further explore the potential of this double loop learning. The challenge of further developing the RID could be made more explicit by asking:

How may the actual redevelopment process of RID be part of the learning experiment adding a third up learning loop and ensuring additional opportunities for a far longer innovation impact for city and port?

The Teaching of Criminal Law Kris Gledhill, Ben Livings, 2016-08-19

The Teaching of Criminal Law provides the first considered discussion of the pedagogy that should inform the teaching of criminal law It originates from a survey of criminal law courses in different parts of the English speaking world which showed significant similarity across countries and over time It also showed that many aspects of substantive law are neglected This prompted the question of whether any real consideration had been given to criminal law course design This book seeks to provide a critical mass of thought on how to secure an understanding of substantive criminal law by examining the course content that best illustrates the thought process of a criminal lawyer by presenting innovative approaches for securing active learning by students and by demonstrating how criminal law can secure other worthwhile graduate attributes by introducing wider contexts This edited collection brings together contributions from academic teachers of criminal law from Australia New Zealand the United Kingdom and Ireland who have considered issues of course design and often implemented them Together they examine several innovative approaches to the teaching of criminal law that have been adopted in a number of law schools around the world both in teaching methodology and substantive content The authors offer numerous suggestions for the design of a criminal law course that will ensure students gain useful insights into criminal law and its role in society This book helps fill the gap in research into criminal law pedagogy and demonstrates that there are alternative ways of delivering this core part of the law degree As such this book will be of key interest to researchers academics and lecturers in the fields of criminal law pedagogy and teaching methods
