A. W. Rhodes, Paul 't Hart, 2014-05-29 Political leadership has made a comeback It was studied intensively not only by political scientists but also by political sociologists and psychologists Sovietologists political anthropologists and by scholars in comparative and development studies from the 1940s to the 1970s Thereafter the field lost its way with the rise of structuralism neo institutionalism and rational choice approaches to the study of politics government and governance Recently however students of politics have returned to studying the role of individual leaders and the exercise of leadership to explain political outcomes The list of topics is nigh endless elections conflict management public policy government popularity development governance networks and regional integration In the media age leaders are presented and stage managed spun DDLas the solution to almost every social problem Through the mass media and the Internet citizens and professional observers follow the rise impact and fall of senior political officeholders at closer quarters than ever before This Handbook encapsulates the resurgence by asking where are we today It orders the multidisciplinary field by identifying the distinct and distinctive contributions of the disciplines It meets the urgent need to take stock It brings together scholars from around the world encouraging a comparative perspective to provide a comprehensive coverage of all the major disciplines methods and regions It showcases both the normative and empirical traditions in political leadership studies and juxtaposes behavioural institutional and interpretive approaches It covers formal office based as well as informal emergent political leadership and in both democratic and undemocratic polities

The Presidentialization of Politics Thomas Poguntke,Paul Webb,2007-04-27 The Presidentialization of Politics shows that the politics of democratic societies is moving towards a presidentialized working mode even in the absence of formal institutional changes These developments can be explained by a combination of long term structural changes in modern politics and societies contingent factors which fluctuate over time While these contingent short term factors relate to the personalities of office holders the overall political agenda and the majority situation in parliament there are several structural factors which are relatively uniform across modern nations First the internationalization of modern politics which is particularly pronounced within the European Union has led to an executive bias of the political process which has strengthened the role of political top elites vis vis their parliamentary groups and or their parties Their predominance has been amplified further by the vastly expanded steering capacities of state machineries which have severely reduced the scope of effective parliamentary control At the same time the declining stability of political alignments has increased the proportion of citizens whose voting decisions are not constrained by long standing party loyalties In conjunction with the mediatization of politics this has increased the capacity of political leaders to by pass their party machines and to appeal directly to voters As a result three interrelated processes have led to a political process increasingly moulded by the inherent logic of presidentialism increasing leadership power and autonomy within the political executive increasing leadership power and autonomy within political parties and increasingly leadership centred electoral processes The book presents evidence for this process of presidentialization for 14 modern democracies including the US and Canada While there are substantial cross national differences the overall thesis holds modern democracies are increasingly following a presidential logic of governance through which leadership is becoming more central and more powerful but also increasingly dependent on successful immediate appeal to the mass public Implications for democratic theory are considered
