Business Model. A perspective on economic informality in Nairobi Njeri Kinyanjui, 2019-03-06 The persistence of indigenous African markets in the context of a hostile or neglectful business and policy environment makes them worthy of analysis An investigation of Afrocentric business ethics is long overdue Attempting to understand the actions and efforts of informal traders and artisans from their own points of view and analysing how they organise and get by allows for viable approaches to be identified to integrate them into global urban models and cultures Using the utu ubuntu model to understand the activities of traders and artisans in Nairobi's markets this book explores how despite being consistently excluded and disadvantaged they shape urban spaces in and around the city and contribute to its development as a whole With immense resilience and without discarding their own socio cultural or economic values informal traders and artisans have created a territorial complex that can be described as the African metropolis African Markets and the Utu buntu Business Model sheds light on the ethics and values that underpin the work of traders and artisans in Nairobi as well as their resilience and positive impact on urbanisation This book makes an important contribution to the discourse on urban economics and planning in African cities Government and Rural Development in East Africa L. Cliffe,J.S.

Coleman,M.R. Doornbos,2012-12-06 The gestation period of this collection has been lengthy even by academic standards Some of our long suffering contributors prepared their original drafts for a workshop held in Nairobi in 1967 and although they have all updated their contributions they are still essentially reporting on research conducted in the late 1960s However we feel that their various findings and analyses of the issues they respectively treat have a continuing validity in our comprehension of the problem of rural development Other contributions reporting on more recent work have been incorporated at different times since most of them not commissioned especially for this symposium but all adding something to our understanding of the problem The slow accumulation of material which makes up this final collection parallels an evolution in our own collective thinking if indeed not that of most students of development over the past decade The progression has not been towards final clarification of the complex and changing East African realities nor towards formulation of an accepted model for their analysis rather it has been marked by the questioning of the initial somewhat simplistic assumptions with which some of us started out and a continuing debate and widening polarization of views about the significance of that process of government penetration of the rural areas which is our focus about the positive or negative value of development policies in East Africa and indeed about the appropriate theoretical approaches to the study of development in general Introduction to R for Social Scientists Ryan Kennedy,Philip D.
