

CHAPTER 1

Operations Management

1.1 Introduction

Teaching the material in Chapter 1 of the book is both the most important and the most difficult part of an operations management course. Most important because it is vital that students develop an enthusiasm for the subject and this is the first attempted early in the course. Difficult because one has to establish some key principles before the 'building blocks' of the subject have been taught. We have found it useful always to work from whatever experience the students have. For post-experience students like MBAs, this is not difficult. One can always ask them to describe the nature of operations in the companies they have worked for. One can even explore some of the prejudices they might hold about operations management (b dull, uncreative, always screwing things up, etc.) and have discussions on that. Undergraduates are more difficult because they usually have less experience, but even so they have experienced many different operations from a customer's point of view. Therefore, one can ask them about recent experiences as a customer (both good and bad) and have a discussion on the importance of operations management around these experiences.

Key teaching objectives

- To excite students with the 'hands-on' excitement that can be gained from an understanding of operations management ("... I want to prevent you ever enjoying a theatre performance, restaurant meal, or shopping experience ever again. I want you continually to be looking for the operations implications of every operation you enter. You are going to be married (you and people who cannot go anywhere without thinking of how you could improve the process)").
- Convince students that all organisations really do have an operations function; therefore, operations management is relevant to every organisation.
- Convince students that all managers are operations managers because all managers manage processes to produce outputs. ("Even marketing managers are operations managers. What you learn as marketing in business school is really the 'technical' side of marketing. Of course this is important, but marketing managers also have to produce marketing reports and information, without mistakes in them, on time, relatively quickly, flexibly enough to contain the latest information, and without using an army of marketing analysts to do so. In other words, they are producing services for internal customers").
- To introduce the some key ideas in the chapter, namely,
 - Operations managers manage transformation processes, with inputs and outputs.
 - Operations can be analysed at three levels: the level of the supply network, the level of the operation itself (sometimes called the level of the organisation) and the level of individual processes.

The novel begins with Richard Papen, a bright but troubled young man, arriving at Hampden College. Richard is immediately drawn to the group of students who call themselves the Classics Club. The club is led by Henry Winter, a brilliant and charismatic young man. Henry is obsessed with Greek mythology and philosophy, and he quickly draws Richard into his world. The other members of the Classics Club are equally as fascinating. Bunny Corcoran is a wealthy and spoiled young man who is always looking for a good time. Charles Tavis is a quiet and reserved young man who is deeply in love with Henry. Camilla Macaulay is a beautiful and intelligent young woman who is drawn to the power and danger of the Classics Club. The students are all deeply in love with Morrow, and they are willing to do anything to please him. Morrow is a complex and mysterious figure, and he seems to be manipulating the students for his own purposes. As the students become more involved with Morrow, they begin to commit increasingly dangerous acts.

The Secret History is a exceptional and suspenseful novel that will keep you speculating until the very end. The novel is a cautionary tale about the dangers of obsession and the power of evil.
