Executive Order 9066 Maisie Conrat, Richard Conrat, 1992 The days following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor were dark days of the American spirit Unable to strike back effectively against the Japanese Empire Americans in the Western states lashed out at fellow citizens and resident aliens of Japanese ancestry Executive Order 9066 signed by President Roosevelt on February 19 1942 was the instrument that allowed military commanders to designate areas from which any or all persons may be excluded Under this order all Japanese and Americans of Japanese ancestry were removed from Western coastal regions to guarded camps in the interior Former Supreme Court Justice Tom C Clark who represented the Department of Justice in the relocation writes in the Epilogue to this book The truth is as this deplorable experience proves that constitutions and laws are not sufficient of themselves Despite the unequivocal language of the Constitution of the United States that the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended and despite the Fifth Amendment's command that no person shall be deprived of life liberty or property without due process of law both of these constitutional safeguards were denied by military action under Executive Order 9066 Back cover

Intelligence, Internment and Relocation Keith Robar, 2000-08-01 The central theme of Intelligence Internment Relocation is the reaction of our government to the threat to its existence presented by the Axis powers in World War II Now armed with fifty years of hindsight we can say that mass evacuation of Japanese aliens Japanese Americans was unnecessary because Japan made no attempt to invade or mount raids on the Pacific coast But raids were planned Attu Kiska were invaded Decisions were made on the basis of intelligence derived from many sources particularly Japanese codes Other sources included the Itaru Tachibana spy ring Dr Takashi Furusawa spy net Kanikichi Yamamoto of the Tokyo Syndicate the Tuna Fishing fleet Four factors were involved in what has become known as the military necessity for the exclusion the military threat from the Japanese navy the collapse of the ethnic Japanese economy the rising tide of vigilante action against our Japanese population the substantial number of disloyal individuals within the Japanese community Roosevelt took action under his war powers powers that actually antedate the constitution the Supreme Court approved The Japanese American Citizens League endorsed the government's actions the ACLU admitted the legality of the president's exclusion order

Personal Justice Denied Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians, 2012-08-01 Personal Justice Denied tells the extraordinary story of the incarceration of mainland Japanese Americans and Alaskan Aleuts during World War II Although this wartime episode is now almost universally recognized as a catastrophe for decades various government officials and agencies defended their actions by asserting a military necessity The Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment was established by act of Congress in 1980 to investigate the detention program Over twenty days it held hearings in cities across the country particularly on the West Coast with testimony from more than 750 witnesses evacuees former government officials public figures interested citizens and historians and other professionals It took steps to locate and to review the records of government action and to analyze contemporary writings and personal and historical accounts The Commission's report is a masterful summary of events surrounding the wartime relocation and detention activities and a strong indictment of the policies that led to them The report and its recommendations were instrumental in effecting a presidential apology and monetary restitution to surviving Japanese Americans and members of the Aleut community

In Defense of Internment Michelle Malkin, 2013-01-29 Everything you've been taught about the World War II internment camps in America is wrong They were not created primarily because of racism or wartime hysteria They did not target only those of Japanese descent They were not Nazi style death camps In her latest investigative tour de force New York Times best selling author Michelle Malkin sets the historical record straight and debunks radical ethnic alarmists who distort history to undermine common sense national security profiling The need for this myth shattering book is vital President Bush's opponents have attacked every homeland defense policy as tantamount to the racist and unjustified World War II internment. Bush's own transportation secretary Norm Mineta continues to milk his childhood experience at a relocation camp as an excuse to ban profiling at airports. Misguided guilt about the past continues to hamper our ability to prevent future terrorist attacks. In Defense of Internment shows that the detention of enemy aliens and the mass evacuation and relocation of ethnic Japanese from the West Coast were not the result of irrational hatred or conspiratorial bigotry. This document-packed book highlights the vast amount of intelligence, including top secret MAGIC messages, which revealed the Japanese espionage threat on the West Coast. Malkin also tells the truth about who resided in enemy alien internment camps: nearly half were of European ancestry. What the West Coast relocation centers were really like: tens of thousands of ethnic Japanese were allowed to leave; hundreds voluntarily chose to move in; why the 1965 federal reparations law for Japanese internees and evacuees was a bipartisan disaster; how both Japanese American and Arab Muslim American leaders have united to undermine America's safety. With trademark fearlessness, Malkin adds desperately needed perspective to the ongoing debate about the balance between civil liberties and national security. In Defense of Internment will outrage, enlighten, and radically change the way you view the past and the present.

The Internment of Memory Abbie Lynn Salyers, 2009. During World War II, over 100,000 Japanese Americans were confined in relocation and internment camps across the country as a result of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Executive Order 9066. While many of their families were behind barbed wire, thousands of other Japanese Americans served in the US Army's Military Intelligence Service and the all-Japanese American 100th Infantry and 442nd Regimental Combat Team. These circumstances were largely public knowledge during the war years, but a pervasive silence on the subject became apparent in the decades following the war. Due to widespread racism and recognition of the hypocrisy evident in a democratic country confining its own citizens, many Americans were content to allow the Japanese American experiences to be forgotten. The destruction and scattering of communities through evacuation and resettlement, and a sense of shame within the Japanese American community, helped perpetuate the silence amongst Japanese Americans as well. The research also demonstrates the diversity within the Japanese American community by disproving the common stereotype of homogeneity within the model minority and revealing the strength of individualism within the community as a significant contributing factor to memorialization efforts.

The Japanese-American Internment: Bigotry or Security?, Executive Order 9066 Maisie Conrat, Richard Conrat, 1992. Nonfiction. Prefaces by Michael McCone and Don T. Nakanishi. The days following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor were dark days for the American spirit. Unable to strike back effectively against the Japanese Empire, Americans in the Western states lashed out at fellow citizens and resident aliens of Japanese ancestry. Executive Order 9066, signed by President Roosevelt on February 19, 1942, was the instrument that allowed military commanders to designate areas from which any or all persons may be excluded. Under this order, all Japanese and Americans of Japanese ancestry were removed from Western coastal regions to guarded camps in the interior.

Former Supreme Court Justice Tom C Clark who represented the Department of Justice in the relocation writes in the Epilogue to this book The truth is as this deplorable experience proves that constitutions and laws are not sufficient of themselves Despite the unequivocal language of the Constitution of the United States that the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended and despite the Fifth Amendment s command that no person shall be deprived of life liberty or property without due process of law both of these constitutional safeguards were denied by military action under Executive Order 9066 Magic David D. Lowman,2001 Personal Justice Denied United States. Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians,1983 Part II p 315 359 concerns the removal of Aleuts to camps in southeastern Alaska and their subsequent resettlement at war s end By Order of the President Greg Robinson,2001-10-29 Using Roosevelt s writings letters and diaries Robinson reveals the presidents central role in making and implementating the internment of Japanese citizens during the war and his reasons for doing so Executive Order 9066 Miasie Conrat,Richard Conrat,1972-09-15

From the epilogue by former Supreme Court Justice Tom C Clark That pictures can express truth more succinctly than words is proved here in the images of Dorothea Lange and the other photographers who documented the Japanese American relocation of World War II The wistful forlorn look of the children the hopeless dejected expression of their elders the Nisei Grill that soon will be under new management the foreboding sign declaring that all one s possessions must be sold the white storekeeper s sneering words We don t want any Japs back here EVER the concentration camps the armed sentries the deportation lines each is a powerful reminder of a nightmare that was acted out in our land of the free all as the result of racism and wartime hysteria Published by The MIT Press for the California Historical Society
