Linking Citizens to Government Lawrence S. Rothenberg,1992-07-31 Lawrence Rothenberg examines some of the most elusive aspects of interest group operations through an in depth study of one of the largest interest groups in Washington Common Cause In developing what might be called a membership theory he asks such questions as why do members join a group Who stays and who leaves and why What is the nature of the relationships among the activists the group leaders and the rank and file members How do these relationships shape the lobbying policies of the group How is the lobbying impact of a group related to the nature of its membership In addition Rothenberg analyses the impact the lobbying efforts of Common Cause have had through case studies of the Congressional vote on the MX missile system and of the agenda setting behind the campaign finance reform bill Boletin Bibliografico III , The Population Ecology of Interest Representation Virginia Gray,David Lowery,1996 This examination of lobbying communities explores how interest group populations are constructed and how they influence politics and public policy By examining how populations of interest groups are comprised this work fills an important gap between existing theories of the origins of individual interest groups and studies of interest group influence The population ecology model of interest communities developed here builds on insights first developed in population biology and later employed by organizational ecologists The model s central premise is that it is the environmental forces confronting interest organizations that most directly shape the contours of interest populations After examining the demography of interest organizations in the fifty American states the population ecology model is used to account for variations in the density and diversity of their interest communities the nature of competition among similar interest organizations to establish viable niches and the impact of alternative configurations of interest communities on the legislative process and the policies it produces These empirical findings suggest that the environment of interest communities is highly constraining limiting their size composition and potential impact on politics Virginia Gray is Professor of Political Science University of Minnesota David Lowery is Burton Craige Professor of Political Science University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Determining Our Environments Walter L. Williams, 2002-06-30 Williams examines the efforts of public agencies to better incorporate citizen participation in the administrative process. He focuses on the effort of the Department of Energy to use citizen advisory boards composed of stakeholders—persons who stand to gain or lose from policy implementation—in its economic transition waste management and environmental restoration programs. The Department's efforts to deal with hazardous and toxic wastes stemming from uranium fuel for the U.S. nuclear weapons program are examined in detail. The case study shows that the stakeholder model was effective; the advisory board was expeditiously organized, reached consensus on critical issues, and accomplished its primary mission. The board's performance was such that the Clinton administration considered it a major example of how federal agencies could be reinvented to produce a government that works better and costs less. Of particular interest to policy makers and researchers involved with U.S. environmental issues and public policy Managing the Environment, Managing Ourselves Richard N. L. Andrews, 2008-10-01 In this book Richard N. L. Andrews looks at American environmental policy over the past four hundred years, shows how it affects environmental issues and public policy decisions today, and poses the central policy challenges for the future. This second edition brings the book up to date through President George W. Bush's first term and gives the current state of American environmental politics and policy. A guide to what every organizational decision maker—public and private—needs to know in an era in which environmental issues have become global. Lynton K. Caldwell Public Administration Review. A wonderful text for students and scholars of environmental history and environmental policy. William L. Andreen Environmental History Degrees of Freedom Keith G. Banting, George Hoberg, Richard Simeon, 1997 The book's primary aim is to determine whether Canada and the United States have become more similar as their economies have become more integrated and their societies more diverse. The authors conclude that although powerful economic and social pressures clearly constrain national governments and lead to convergence in some areas, distinctive cultural and political processes preserve room for distinctive national responses to important problems of the late twentieth century. Authors include Keith Banting (University of Alberta), Marsha Chandler (University of Toronto), George Hoberg (University of Toronto), Christopher Manfredi (McGill University), George Perlin (Queen's University), Douglas Purvis (Queen's University), Richard Simeon, and Elaine Willis (consultant, Toronto). Interest Group Politics in the Northeastern States Ronald J. Lobbying Ethics and Reform Scott T. Harden, 2006 Lobbyists and others who seek to participate in public policy activities through the formation of coalitions and associations whose members may not be identifiable and the use of grassroots campaigns that attempt to mobilize citizens to advance the message of a lobbyist's client have raised concerns. Some lobbying activities have also been linked to campaign finance practices. Congressional procedures regarding the acceptance of gifts from lobbyists and the inclusion of earmarks advocated by lobbyists in appropriations legislation. Legislative proposals related to lobbying focus on six broad areas including: 1. enhanced requirements for electronic filing of lobbying reports and semiannual reports required under LDA; 2. redefinition of the term "client" under the statute; 3. more detailed disclosure by lobbyists of which groups and entities are funding coalitions and associations they represent; 4. more detailed disclosure by lobbyists of the individuals in Congress and the executive branch they contact; 5. congressional rules regarding the interactions of members and staff with lobbyists; 6. the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 as amended as it relates to lobbying activities.

Ideologies and Institutions Richard J. Piper, 1997-05-08. In this important and original book, J. Richard Piper provides the most comprehensive examination to date of the profound impact of ideological prescriptions on twentieth-century American politics. Piper analyzes the institutional and constitutional developments associated with the American conservative liberal paradigm from the New Deal to the present, focusing on constitutional jurisprudence, presidential-congressional relations, the role of the judiciary, federalism, and the administrative state. Concluding that America's competing constitutional philosophies frequently serve not as ends in themselves but as instruments for attaining power and policy goals, Piper raises significant questions about the future of the conservative liberal dichotomy that has characterized American politics since the New Deal. Ideologies and Institutions is unique in its focus on institutional prescriptions and its integration and synthesis of extensive history, political science, and sociology literature. Anyone interested in constitutional issues, political history, and the distinctions between the liberal and conservative philosophies will find Ideologies and Institutions valuable.
