Rodríguez, Eric B. Taylor, 2002-07-31 Salvelinus species are one of the most thoroughly studied groups of fishes. Many reasons explain this intense interest in charr biology. Charrs have a Holarctic distribution encompassing many Asian, North American and European countries and occupy diverse marine and freshwater environments. Furthermore, the current distribution of charr includes areas that were directly influenced by climate and topographic change associated with the many Pleistocene glaciations. Undoubtedly, these conditions have promoted much of the tremendous morphological, ecological and genetic variability and plasticity within Salvelinus species and they make charr very good models to study evolutionary processes in action. Many charr species also exhibit demographic characteristics such as slow growth, late maturity and life in extreme environments that may increase their susceptibility to extinction from habitat changes and overexploitation, especially in depauperate aquatic habitats. This vulnerability makes understanding their biology of great relevance to biodiversity and conservation. Finally, charr are of great cultural, commercial and recreational significance to many communities and their intimate linkage with human societies has stimulated much interest in this enigmatic genus. This volume comprises a selection of papers presented at the fourth International Charr Symposium held in Trois Rivières, Québec, Canada, from 26 June to 1 July 2000. It includes 31 papers on ecological interactions and behaviour, trophic polymorphism, movement and migration, ecophysiology and evolutionary genetics, ecological parasitology, environmental stress and conservation. These studies cannot cover all recent developments in the ecology, behaviour and conservation of Salvelinus species, but collecting them into a special volume should bring attention to current research on this important genus and stimulate further work on Salvelinus species. Rapports et procès-verbaux des réunions International Council for the Exploration of the Sea, 1981. Williot, Guy Nonnotte, Denise Vizziano-Cantonnet, Mikhail Chebanov, 2018-04-06 The biology of the Siberian sturgeon Acipenser baerii Brandt 1869 has become a very attractive subject of investigation for biologists since the 1980s This volume 1 is part of a two volume set devoted to the species the second of which focuses on farming The present volume is divided into three parts Biology and ecology Biology and physiology of reproduction and Ecophysiology i e adaptation to the environment The first part addresses a broad range of topics such as the ecology including a new approach to species specificity a new insight on the mineralization of vertebral elements two approaches to sex determination transposable elements in the gonads early ontogeny olfaction and gustation nutrition and swimming The second part includes neurochemical and anatomical descriptions of the central nervous system and an updated version of the oogenesis the characteristics of both sperm and spermatozoa and a synthesis on gonadal steroids synthesis plasmatic levels and biological activities In turn the third part reveals how the physiology of the species changes depending on environmental factors such as oxygen ammonia and nitrite Some fundamental consequences of ammonia are developed sublethal and lethal levels effects on gill epithelium and haematology acid base balance on AA and adenyl nucleotides levels in plasma brain and muscle tissue In addition the book includes two methodological chapters dealing with fish dorsal aortic cannulation and respiration physiology
