Instruments And The Imagination:

Instruments and the Imagination Thomas L. Hankins, Robert J. Silverman, 1999 Thomas Hankins and Robert Silverman investigate an array of instruments from the seventeenth through the nineteenth century that seem at first to be marginal to science magnetic clocks that were said to operate by the movements of sunflower seeds magic lanterns ocular harpsichords machines that played different colored lights in harmonious mixtures Aeolian harps a form of wind chime and other instruments of natural magic designed to produce wondrous effects By looking at these and the first recording instruments the stereoscope and speaking machines the authors show that scientific instruments first made their appearance as devices used to evoke wonder in the beholder as in works of magic and the theater The authors also demonstrate that these instruments even though they were often tricks were seen by their inventors as more than trickery In the view of Athanasius Kircher for instance the sunflower clock was not merely a hoax but an effort to demonstrate however fraudulently his truly held belief that the ability of a flower to follow the sun was due to the same cosmic magnetic influence as that which moved the planets and caused the rotation of the earth The marvels revealed in this work raise and answer questions about the connections between natural science and natural magic the meaning of demonstration the role of language and the senses in science and the connections among art music literature and natural science Originally published in 1995 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905

The Artificial and the Natural Bernadette Bensaude-Vincent, William R. Newman, 2007 These essays written by specialists of different periods and various disciplines reveal that the division between nature and art has been continually challenged and reassessed in Western thought Nature and art the essays suggest are mutually constructed defining and redefining themselves

Instruments of the Divinity Christopher van Ginhoven Rey, 2013-10-24 In Instruments of the Divinity Christopher van Ginhoven Rey shows that an important reflection on God's providential praxis animates the foundational documents of the Society of Jesus Focusing on Saint Ignatius of Loyola's conception of Jesuits as the instruments of a laboring God the book explores the philosophical and theological roots of the metaphor of the instrument and its place in the social imaginary of the Jesuit order Close readings of the Spiritual Exercises the Jesuit Constitutions and a selection of letters by Ignatius call attention to the existence of a rhetoric of instrumentality that provides the basis for the Society's project of instruction its loving affirmation of the world and its attempts to differentiate itself from its monastic predecessors

Popular Exhibitions, Science and Showmanship, 1840-1910 Joe Kember, John Plunkett, Jill A. Sullivan, 2016-09-12 Victorian culture was characterized by a proliferation of shows and exhibitions These were encouraged by the development of new sciences and technologies together with changes in transportation education and leisure patterns

The essays in this collection look at exhibitions and their influence in terms of location technology and ideology The Restless Clock Jessica Riskin,2016 Today a scientific explanation is not meant to ascribe agency to natural phenomena we would not say a rock falls because it seeks the center of the earth Even for living things in the natural sciences and often in the social sciences the same is true A modern botanist would not say that plants pursue sunlight This has not always been the case nor perhaps was it inevitable Since the seventeenth century many thinkers have made agency in various forms central to science The Restless Clock examines the history of this principle banning agency in the life sciences It also tells the story of dissenters embracing the opposite idea that agency is essential to nature The story begins with the automata of early modern Europe as models for the new science of living things and traces questions of science and agency through Descartes Leibniz Lamarck and Darwin among many others Mechanist science Jessica Riskin shows had an associated theology the argument from design which found evidence for a designer in the mechanisms of nature Rejecting such appeals to a supernatural God the dissenters sought to naturalize agency rather than outsourcing it to a divine engineer Their model cast living things not as passive but as active self making machines The conflict between passive and active mechanist approaches maintains a subterranean life in current science shaping debates in fields such as evolutionary biology cognitive science and artificial intelligence This history promises not only to inform such debates but also our sense of the possibilities for what it means to engage in science and even what it means to be alive Life After Death Peter Holman,2010 It is often thought that the viola da gamba dropped out of British musical life in the 1690s The author demonstrates that the instrument continued to be used through the 18th and 19th centuries up to the beginning of the early music revival in the 1890s The Instrument World ,1928 Uncertain Futures Jens Beckert,Richard Bronk,2018-07-05 Uncertain Futures considers how economic actors visualize the future and decide how to act in conditions of radical uncertainty It starts from the premise that dynamic capitalist economies are characterized by relentless innovation and novelty and hence exhibit an indeterminacy that cannot be reduced to measurable risk The organizing question then becomes how economic actors form expectations and make decisions despite the uncertainty they face This edited volume lays the foundations for a new model of economic reasoning by showing how in conditions of uncertainty economic actors combine calculation with imaginaries and narratives to form fictional expectations that coordinate action and provide the confidence to act It draws on groundbreaking research in economic sociology economics anthropology and psychology to present theoretically grounded empirical case studies These demonstrate how grand narratives central bank forward guidance economic forecasts finance models business plans visions of technological futures and new era stories influence behaviour and become instruments of power in markets and societies The market impact of shared calculative devices social narratives and contingent imaginaries underlines the rationale for a new form of narrative economics The I Can't Sing Book Jackie Silberg,1998 Explains to readers how to teach children music and includes easy games and activities

Drawing Futures Bob Sheil,Frédéric Migayrou,Luke Pearson,Laura Allen,2016-11-11 Drawing Futures brings together international designers and artists for speculations in contemporary drawing for art and architecture

Despite numerous developments in technological manufacture and computational design that provide new grounds for designers the act of drawing still plays a central role as a vehicle for speculation There is a rich and long history of drawing tied to innovations in technology as well as to revolutions in our philosophical understanding of the world In reflection of a society now underpinned by computational networks and interfaces allowing hitherto unprecedented views of the world the changing status of the drawing and its representation as a political act demands a platform for reflection and innovation Drawing Futures will present a compendium of projects writings and interviews that critically reassess the act of drawing and where its future may lie Drawing Futures focuses on the discussion of how the field of drawing may expand synchronously alongside technological and computational developments The book coincides with an international conference of the same name taking place at The Bartlett School of Architecture UCL in November 2016 Bringing together practitioners from many creative fields the book discusses how drawing is changing in relation to new technologies for the production and dissemination of ideas
