The Importance of Integrating Environmental Education Into the School Curriculum Katherine A. Worley, 2007

Environmental education in the schools creating a program that works. , Integrating Environmental Education Into the Curriculum Keelin McCarthy-Sanger, 1998 A Case Study of The Integration of Environmental Education in the Primary School Curriculum Sekinah Sehlola, 2010 In examining opportunities to learn environmental education at the school and classroom level we were interested in ascertaining how teachers in primary schools have made sense of the new policy of integrating environmental education in the various learning areas The researchers wished to find out how workable the policy was in one school context and what its consequences were in terms of providing better opportunities for learners Indeed the case of Sechaba Primary has provided some insights into these questions We now know how some schools have taken the new policy and made it work for them They have developed their own local environmental policy which served as a basis for mobilising and organising resources for learning and teaching environmental education at the school It is this localised policy that seemed important in driving the integration of the environment into the curriculum at Sechaba Primary Furthermore the local policy created a platform for mobilising the intellectual and material resources for the integration of environmental education at the school For us the most important lesson coming out of this research therefore is the need for local school actors to take the initiative and be the agents of change Agency and teacher leadership have proved to be cornerstones of the success story of the integration of environmental education at Sechaba Primary There is however still a long way to go in terms of reaching the conceptual depths of the integration and extended participation of learners in environmental education as the case of Sechaba Primary has illustrated The lessons learned from the Sechaba Primary case would be applicable in schools that have taken environmental education as seriously as Sechaba Primary has done

The Integration of Environmental Education Into School Curriculum Annaliese Julie Halvorsen, 2001 A Case Study of the Integration of Environmental Learning in the Primary School Curriculum Mmahlomotse Sekinah Sehlola, 2013 In line with international developments the Department of Education in South Africa SA recognises environmental education as a key vehicle to respond to the national and global environmental crisis DoE 2001 P 3 For this reason the post 1994 education provision sought to infuse environmental education into the new curriculum called Curriculum 2005 The White Paper on Education and Training RSA 1995 perceived environmental education as a means to a better quality of life for all people and argued that it should be integrated at all levels of the SA Education and Training

system The White Paper further stated that environmental education involving an inter disciplinary integrated and active approach to learning must be a vital element of all levels and programmes of the education and training system in order to create environmentally literate and active citizens and ensure that all South Africans present and future enjoy a decent quality of life through the sustainable use of resources RSA 1995 P 22 How have the schools responded to this challenge by the new integration policy How is the environmental learning provided for in the primary school curriculum across SA What resources exist to make environmental policy workable in schools and how are these resources mobilised and organised to promote learning These and other questions formed the basis for the present inquiry An Opportunity to Learn OTL study was conducted to explore how one primary school in SA provides OTL about the environment The main aim of the study was to understand the manner in which teachers integrate environmental learning in the school curriculum A qualitative research approach was used as a mode of inquiry for this study Interviews classroom observations and document analysis were used as data collection methods The findings of the study suggest that Sechaba Primary School has managed to integrate environmental learning in its curriculum through the help of non governmental organisations NGOs and other stakeholders The research concluded by arguing that OTL about the environment appear to be enhanced where there are strong connections between the schools and NGOs Specifically the following set of recommendations was documented First local leadership and agency are required to pursue the various opportunities and resources to build the school s capacity for environmental learning Schools should be encouraged to designate and support local leaders to take responsibility for driving the integration of environmental learning into their curriculum Such integration is too important and maybe too demanding to be left to individual teachers independently in their own classrooms Second converting the latent capacity and or physical and intellectual infrastructure for environmental learning into real OTL about the environment for the students will continue to remain a challenge for some of the teachers while others have managed the integration in some exemplary fashion Opportunities for teachers to observe each other plan together and work collaboratively on issues of integration should be created at school and district level Third it is critical that all teachers undergo in service training regarding the implementation of environmental education and such training should provide teachers with enough time to learn One of the major limitations of the Department of Education s programme of implementation of the new environmental learning policy has been the inability to provide teachers with enough time to learn and implement the new ideas of the revised national curriculum statement Finally it is important to reiterate the importance of providing adequate resources for implementation of environmental learning from the Department of Education Having said that however the case of Sechaba has demonstrated how such resources can also be mobilised from elsewhere outside the system Encouraging beneficial partnerships between schools and NGOs may in itself be a valuable resource to encourage many primary schools in SA for whom government resources in this field continue to remain inadequate

Understanding Environmental Education Chong Shimray, 2024-06-28 The book establishes the importance of environmental education by tracing its history and the developments that have taken place subsequently to date. It provides basic understanding about environmental education as well as valuable suggestions for its effective incorporation in the school curriculum. The strength of the book lies in its content as all major areas of environmental education have been addressed such as school curriculum, professional development and policies especially in the context of India, thus making it a unique and go-to resource for all stakeholders working in the field of environmental education. In the coming decades the general public will be required ever more often to understand complex environmental issues, evaluate proposed environmental plans and understand how individual decisions affect the environment at local to global scales. Thus it is of fundamental importance to ensure that higher quality education about these ecological issues raises the environmental literacy of the general public. In order to achieve this, teachers need to be trained as well as classroom practice enhanced. This volume focuses on the integration of environmental education into science teacher education. The book begins by providing readers with foundational knowledge of environmental education as it applies to the discipline of science education. It relates the historical and philosophical underpinnings of EE as well as current trends in the subject that relate to science teacher education. Later chapters examine the pedagogical practices of environmental education in the context of science teacher education. Case studies of environmental education teaching and learning strategies in science teacher education and instructional practices in K-12 science classrooms are included. This book shares knowledge and ideas about environmental education pedagogy and serves as a reliable guide for both science teacher educators and K-12 science educators who wish to insert environmental education into science teacher education. Coverage includes everything from the methods employed in summer camps to the use of podcasting as a pedagogical aid. Studies have shown that schools that do manage to incorporate EE into their teaching programs demonstrate significant growth in student achievement as well as improved student behavior This text argues that the multidisciplinary nature of environmental education itself requires problem solving critical thinking and literacy skills that benefit students work right across the curriculum
