The Electronic Grapevine Diane L. Borden, Kerric Harvey, 2013-11-05 The widespread use of the Internet as a tool for gathering and disseminating information raises serious questions for journalists and their readers about the process of reporting information Using virtual sources and publishing online is changing the way in which journalism takes place and its effect on the society it serves USE LAST THREE PARAGRAPHS ONLY FOR GENERAL CATALOGS The Electronic Grapevine explores the use of online media by reporters in the United States and examines the impact that usage may have on how journalism is framed in the cultural sphere as well as how it is conducted in the professional one It contains a mix of material examining how it feels to do online journalism how it affects those who consume it different ways that media scholars go about trying to understand it better and the likely social and cultural impact of Internet like technologies on the public at whom all this electronic information is eventually aimed Drawing from the emerging scholarly work in the field and from the real life experiences of working journalists Borden and Harvey collect contributions that examine why journalists use the Internet what changes it makes in how they approach their jobs and what differences they see in conducting their daily newsgathering with this medium rather than other methods The volume also analyses when and why journalists do not use online media and what the impact of the decision to use or not use the Internet may mean for the outer world whose perceptions of itself are so often shaped by journalistic portrait This series of thought provoking original essays explores the impact of computer based information and communication services on traditional journalistic routines and practices and thereby addresses a critical gap in the scholarly literature on communication law and culture Distinguishing between linkage devices like the Internet and database resources such as LEXIS NEXIS America Online and others this book examines the ways in which both types of online services may reshape and redefine not only the products of journalistic effort but the newsgathering process itself

Liberalization and Regulation of the Telecommunications Sector in Transition Countries

Ekaterina Markova, 2008-11-14 Telecommunications are increasingly recognized as a key component in the infrastructure of economic development For many years there were state owned monopolies in the telecommunications sector In transition economies they were characterized by especially poor performance and high access deficits as telecommunications were considered to be a non profit oriented production process intended to support the socio economic superstructures As a result the starting point for the reform processes in transition countries was quite poor performed public monopolies functioned under completely different circumstances as the peers in the market economies The main question of this book is what the strategies for the successful future development of the telecommunications sector in transition countries are The special focus is on Russia the largest of the transition countries

Internet Resource Pricing Models Ke Xu, Yifeng Zhong, Huan He, 2013-08-13 This brief guides the reader through three basic Internet resource pricing models using an Internet cost analysis Addressing the evolution of service types it presents several corresponding mechanisms which can ensure pricing implementation and resource allocation The authors discuss utility optimization of network pricing methods in economics and underline two classes of pricing methods including system optimization and entities strategic optimization The brief closes with two examples of the newly proposed pricing strategy helping to solve the profit distribution problem brought by P2P free riding and improve the pricing efficiency with the introduction of the price discrimination The Internet resource pricing strategy is not only the key factor of Internet resource allocation efficiency but also the determinant of the profit The methods and models discussed in Internet Resource Pricing Models increase the efficiency of existing pricing strategies to ensure a sound and sustainable development of the Internet The brief will help researchers and professionals working with this key factor of Internet resource allocation

Wireless Technology Prospects and Policy Options National Research Council, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Computer Science and

Telecommunications Board, Committee on Wireless Technology Prospects and Policy Options, 2011-02-24 The use of radio frequency communication commonly referred to as wireless communication is becoming more pervasive as well as more economically and socially important Technological progress over many decades has enabled the deployment of several successive generations of cellular telephone technology which is now used by many billions of people worldwide the near universal addition of wireless local area networking to personal computers and a proliferation of actual and proposed uses of wireless communications The flood of new technologies applications and markets has also opened up opportunities for examining and adjusting the policy framework that currently governs the management and use of the spectrum and the institutions involved in it and models for allocating spectrum and charging for it have come under increasing scrutiny Yet even as many agree that further change to the policy framework is needed there is debate about precisely how the overall framework should be changed what trajectory its evolution should follow and how dramatic or rapid the change should be Many groups have opinions positions demands and desires related to these questions reflecting multiple commercial social and political agendas and a mix of technical economic and social perspectives The development of technologies and associated policy and regulatory regimes are often closely coupled an interplay apparent as early as the 1910s when spectrum policy emerged in response to the growth of radio communications As outlined in this report current and ongoing technological advances suggest the need for a careful reassessment of the assumptions that inform spectrum policy in the United States today This book seeks to shine a spotlight on 21st century technology trends and to outline the implications of emerging technologies for spectrum management in ways that the committee hopes will be useful to those setting future spectrum policy

Competition, Regulation, and Convergence Sharon E. Gillett, Ingo Vogelsang, 1999-09-01 The telecommunications industry has experienced dynamic changes over the past several years and those exciting events and developments are reflected in the chapters of this volume The Telecommunications Policy Research Conference TPRC holds an unrivaled place at the center of national public policy discourse on issues in communications and information TPRC is one of the few places where multidisciplinary discussions take place as the norm The papers collected here represent the current state of research in telecommunication policy and are organized around four topics competition regulation universal service and convergence The contentious competition issues include bundling as a strategy in software competition combination bidding in spectrum auctions and anticompetitive behavior in the Internet Regulation takes up telephone number portability decentralized regulatory decision making versus central regulatory authority data protection restrictions to the flow of information over the Internet and failed Global Information Infrastructure initiatives Universal service addresses the persistent gap in telecommunications from a socioeconomic perspective the availability of competitive Internet access service and cost modeling The convergence section concentrates on the costs of Internet telephony versus circuit switched telephony the intertwined evolution of new services new technologies and new consumer equipment and the politically charged question of asymmetric regulation of Internet telephony and conventional telephone service
