

of the proposed voluntary national tests in making high-stakes decisions about individual students. The committee has also examined existing and potential strategies for promoting appropriate test use.

USES AND MISUSES OF TESTS

Blanket criticisms of tests are not justified. When tests are used in ways that meet relevant psychometric, legal, and educational standards, students' scores provide important information that, combined with information from other sources, can lead to decisions that promote student learning and equality of opportunity. For example, tests can identify learning differences among students that the education system needs to address. Because decisions about tracking, promotion, and graduation will be made with or without testing, proposed alternatives to the use of test scores should be at least equally accurate, efficient, and fair.

It is also a mistake to accept observed test scores as either infallible or immutable. When test use is inappropriate, especially in making high-stakes decisions about individuals, it can undermine the quality of education and equality of opportunity. For example, the lower achievement test scores of racial and ethnic minorities and students from low-income families reflect persistent inequalities in American society and its schools, not inalterable realities about those groups of students. The improper use of test scores can reinforce these inequalities. This lends special urgency to the requirement that test use with high-stakes consequences for individual students be appropriate and fair.

Decisions about tracking, promotion, and graduation differ from one another in important ways. They differ most importantly in the role that mastery of past material and readiness for new material play. Thus, the committee has considered the role of large-scale high-stakes testing in relation to each type of decision separately in this report. But tracking, promotion, and graduation decisions also share common features that pertain both to appropriate test use and to their educational and social consequences.

Members of some minority groups, English-language learners, and students from low socioeconomic backgrounds are overrepresented in lower-track classes and among those denied promotion or graduation on the basis of test scores. Moreover, these same groups of students are underrepresented in high-track classes, "exam" schools, and "gifted and talented" programs. In some cases, such as courses for English-language
